Carmel battles over coast commission seat

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

AN ENVIRONMENTALLYminded Carmel City Council is involved in a duel with what it perceives as prodevelopment forces over an appointment to the Coastal Commission.

The resignation of central district representative Grace McCarthy and the possibility that her hand-picked successor may be appointed to the commission by state Assembly Speaker Willie Brown has touched off a controversy that has pitted Carmel against its neighbors.

Carmel has refused to join with seven other Monterey Peninsula cities that support the nomination of Mrs. McCarthy's choice - Helen Bedesem, current councilwoman and past mayor of Half Moon Bay.

The Mayors' Selection Committee met Nov. 12 in Marina and nominated Mrs. Bedesem for appointment to the Coastal Commission. The vote was 7-2, a bare majority of the 12-member panel. If the vote had been 6-3, the nomination of Mrs. Bedesem would have failed.

Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend and Greenfield Mayor Elias de Leon opposed the nomination.

Mayors who voted in favor of Mrs. Bedesem were: Gerald Fry of Monterey, Florus Williams of Pacific Grove, George Takahashi of Marina, David Pendergrass of Sand City, Irving Copley of King City, Jim Barnes of Salinas, and Frank Ledesma of Soledad.

'Generous coverage'

Dear Editor:

On behalf of everyone at Guide Dogs for the Blind, thank you so very much for the generous coverage you gave our organization in your Nov. 4 issue. Such exposure is invaluable and we are deeply grateful.

I hope you can visit us one day soon — perhaps with the next group that comes from the peninsula.

Warm regards.

No more pines!

Dear Editor:

I am truly surprised the forestry commission and city forester still advocate the planting of Monterey Pines. I was born and grew up here and many of my favorite views have been ruined by Monterey Pines.

Taking Highway 1 to Monterey, the view of the bay is being increasingly blocked. Bay and ocean views along Highway 68 to Pacific Grove are fast disappearing. One used to catch magnificent glimpses of the Bay driving past the hospital and some of our best sunsets were viewed from the turnout just before descending into Pacific Grove. The La Playa Hotel is one of only a handful of restaurants with an ocean and sunset view — but the pines should completely block that pleasure in two or three years.

This "tall, majestic" urban forest is not only depriving us of some of our best views and shading our houses, but it is also altering our climate. An average mature tree can evaporate 100 gallons of water on a sunny day; that's equal to five home air conditioners — multiply that times the number of pines. Just what we need — additional air conditioning.

As our energy supplies dwindle we need all the radiant energy available and that can't be achieved by vegetation that blocks sunlight. An average Monterey pine grows six feet annually and under optimum conditions, (such as urban gardens), it can grow 13 or more feet per year.

Other facts attributable to Monterey pines:
•Sidewalks, streets, and gardens are constantly uplifted by pine roots (the roots grow laterally rather than downward).

•The Ph of the soil is changing and becoming more acidic, which limits the types of vegetation that can be planted.

•Monterey pines are susceptable to disease and promoting monoculture only enhances that 'quality'.

•And what about all those damn pine needles that have to be raked up over and over again? (at least deciduous trees have too good manners to drop their leaves all at once).

I am not suggesting obliteration of Monterey pines, but replacement of some of them with other species. Why can't we have an urban forest with some diversity?

Carmel recycling successful

MIKE DANIELS threw a bundle of papers into his truck that picks up recycleable materials as part of a special pilot program offered in Carmel by the Monterey Peninsula Garbage and Refuse Disposal District. (M.G. photo.)

CARMEL HAS become the testing ground for a special recycling program and so far it has been successful, say the operators.

"We thought Carmel would be a good place to test it out. We feel there's a lot of people in the area interested in recycling and who will make the effort to recycle," Monterey Peninsula Garbage and Refuse District Manager David Myers told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

"This is the first time the curbside program has been offered at all in an entire city. We just felt if it is going to work at all, it will work in Carmel," Myers added.

City residents can place their separated newspapers, glass and aluminum cans on the curbs on the day of their scheduled garbage pickup. A special truck will pick up the materials free of charge.

The program is operated in conjunction with the John Roscelli Corp., which has the garbage collection contract for the city of Carmel.

The total number of pickups has risen steadily since the program began last month, according to Bill Parsons, general manager of the John Roscelli Corp.

"I think we're talking in the neighborhood of about 4,000 stops since it began. The first week we averaged about 25 pickups a day and now it has increased to an average of about 80 pickups," Parsons said.

The recyclable materials are collected about an hour after the normal garbage pickup, Parsons explained.

The truck then takes the material to special bins behind Brinton's in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. The materials are transported by a larger truck to the dump in Marina.

The materials are eventually sold by the garbage district to firms that recycle glass, paper and aluminum.

AS MOST hardened newspaper readers know, this space is usually occupied around this time of year by prosestylings of various pundits who recite all the reasons why they — and we—should be thankful. Since this has become almost as much an American tradition as the proverbial Thanksgiving dinner, I guess I should have at least one crack at it, too.

So if you're sitting around, waiting for the bird to cook or trying to retain consciousness after having stuffed yourself, here are a few stray thoughts that may or may not be appropriate for this season.

First off, I'd like to say I'm thankful for tourists. They drop vast sums of money into the local economy, without which the hostelry taxes would not be so generous, or capable of supporting practically a third of the Carmel municipal budget. Besides, they are a perfect scapegoat and conversation piece. We can have it both ways with this one: we can blame them for everything that bothers us and never have to confront a single tourist face-to-face. They make great cocktail party chatter, too.

I'm thankful that Measure A — the local planning initiative which was defeated in the November election didn't pass. If that precedent-setting initiative had succeeded, it could have lulled people into a false sense of security. Since it was so clearly defeated, those who truly care about the integrity of the planning process must continue their vigil. They must also start planning once again to run some trustworthy, representative people for the board of supervisors. I voted for Measure A, but I've come to agree with opponents who said the solution is to elect good people to county government. Maybe we need to have a complete house-cleaning over at the courthouse in Salinas. The intent of Measure A was fine, but since it didn't succeed, the task at hand has become even more clear. And that's something to be thankful for.

I'm very thankful that the Carmel police will change the color of their uniforms from green to blue with the start of the new year. That way, they won't have tourists ("visitors") coming up and asking them if they need a token to ride the bus. After all, police should look like police, right?

have been recycled through the program.

Expansion of the program to other are

Expansion of the program to other areas depends on its success here, Myers pointed out. The service is only offered in the city of Carmel.

"The program in Carmel is designed to go on indefinitely," he said. "It just depends. If it continues to be successful, and I think it is, it will continue and we can try and expand it to other areas".

Funds for the project were obtained through a $90,000 grant from the state Waste Water Management Board.

The aluminum cans are sold to Reynolds Aluminum in Salinas for between 20 and 28 cents a pound. Newspapers are weighed and shipped to Taiwan and Korea where they are hand-sorted and recycled. Value of the newsprint is about $18 a ton.

The glass is crushed and sold to Circo-Glass of Marina for about $17 a ton.

Myers said pickups have increased, but the project is not making money.

In the first month of operation, about 1,000 pounds of newspapers, 400 to 500 pounds of glass and 200 pounds of aluminum

Howard Brunn gearing up campaign for Fifth District supervisor race

By ROBERT MISKIMON

HOWARD BRUNN of Carmel is carefully and deliberately laying the groundwork for what he hopes will become a full-bore race for Fifth District Monterey County supervisor.

Although the former city councilman and longtime Carmelite told the Pine Cone/ Outlook last week he is not ready to announce his candidacy, Brunn said a decision will be made "in mid-January."

Brunn indicated last April when he stepped down from one four-year term on the Carmel City Council that he would seriously consider a race for supervisor.

The next election for the seat now held by Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley will be held in June of 1984 — only a whisper away in the long-range strategic thinking of political veterans, such as Brunn.

Initial indications are that discontent with the board of supervisors is high in the Fifth District. Brunn said. But he refrained from any attacks - personal or otherwise - on Supervisor Peters.

"If I run, I would run not on Mr. Peters' shortcomings but rather on my own ability and record," Brunn said. However, in the

'The opponents of Measure A said that if you don't lke the plans approved by the board of supervisors, then you should elect someone you like. That's what I'm trying to do by running.'

same breath Brunn declared that the widespread public perception in the Fifth District is that the board of supervisors "has ridden roughshod over the actual needs of the people who live in the area."

Brunn, 59, said he has a "loose group of about 12 to 14 people" who are working with him to measure potential support for his candidacy.

"There's a group of us testing the waters to ascertain what support I would have," Brunn said. "We're doing research, defining the issues and asking questions.

"If it appears positive for me, I'll do it. I haven't announced, but I have done everything short of that. We've got three or four weeks into January to determine what kind of support we can count on.

"We've gotten a good reaction from those we've contacted who share our views."

Brunn's supporters, many of whom are "very qualified, statistically competent" people, plan a methodical assessment of support among the 28,458 voters of the Fifth District, Brunn said. The district includes Carmel, Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach, Cachagua, Big Sur and the South Coast — an area of "very savvy voters," Brunn said.

"We plan a workmanlike approach," Brunn said. "We're getting questions together to ask in key areas to measure what we see as our support."

WHEN BRUNN ran for Carmel City Council in 1978, he received 1,098 votes, or 36.1 percent of total votes cast. When he ran in a three-way contest for mayor in 1980, he got 657 votes, or 37.8 percent of the total. Barney Laiolo won that two-year term with 712 votes.

What has he learned from his years in politics?

"In the campaign for mayor, I had so many good people working for me I didn't do enough door-to-door walking myself," Brunn said. "A lot of money flowed in and we spent it. It appeared we were spending a lot of money, and people wondered why.

Brunn said he learned several lessons from that campaign: 1) Carmelites don't like what they perceive as a high-powered, high profile political campaign, 2) A candidate needs to spend a great deal of time walking door-todoor, 3) It's easy to be mislead by wellintentioned, idealistic supporters about the outcome of an election.

Brunn goes out of his way to make it clear that this time, he is playing it safe.

HOWARD BRUNN, Carmel businessman and former member of the Carmel City Council, says he is carefully and deliberately testing the political waters in advance of a

Some of the key issues in his campaign-inthe-making already are crystal clear, Brunn said. These include the Carmel Valley Master Plan, the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program, Hatton Canyon Freeway, Carmel River dam/Arroyo Seco River dam, the Big Sur transfer of density credit proposal.

All of these issues relate to the way in which the Monterey County Board of Supervisors has handled land use decisions, and the way in which the board has dealt with local citizens, Brunn said.

"I already have clearly-defined positions on all the issues, except the question of the dam," Brunn told this newspaper. "Having grown up on the Carmel River, it would be my fondest dream to see it flow again — but not at the expense of over-development."

Construction of a new dam on the Carmel River could restore the river to year-round flows and help stabilize stream banks and reduce sedimentation, according to some dam proponents such as Ed Lee of Carmel, a member of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors.

Brunn said he is concerned that the public has not been sufficiently informed about, or involved in, the development of county plans for Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach, and Big residents having a complete understanding of its impact," Brunn said. "The fact is that it calls for 270 hotel units and 80 condominium units, and it provides for no additional sewage treatment facilities."

I HERE ARE 140 homes in Pebble Beach still on septic tanks," Brunn emphasized. "The whole process of this plan has been accelerated without proper input from the citizens involved."

Brunn said he is one of those who refers to the Del Monte Forest coastal plan as the "Peters/Moore plan," because the document was drawn up by Fifth District Supervisor William Peters and Fourth District Supervisor Michal Moore, after the Monterey County Planning Commission reached an impasse on the plan.

Critics of the document — which was modified by the board of supervisors to reflect lower development density before it was submitted to the Coastal Commission have said it is almost a carbon copy of a 1977 development plan devised by the Pebble Beach Corp.

The coastal plan will be heard by the Coastal Commission at its Dec. 2 meeting. The 1980 Carmel Valley Master Plan,

The plan — by court order — must be revised and readopted by the board of supervisors in light of an environmental impact report. Until the plan is readopted, a moratorium against discretionary building permits in Carmel Valley is in effect.

"The Carmel Valley Master Plan provides 2,500 home sites with available water, but there are 1.047 sites for which there will be no water under the present allocation," Brunn said. "The people of Carmel Valley have every reason to be concerned about such a plan."

Brunn is worried that a controversial transfer of density scheme will be adopted by the board of supervisors without a full understanding of how the system would operate.

The transfer of density credit (TDC) system was drawn up by Fourth District Supervisor Michal Moore as a way to compensate property owners who are prohibited from building on prime scenic land on the Big Sur coast. It would enable those property owners to sell development rights from their land to be used by purchasers in areas designated for higher density.

The TDC system has been recommended to the board of supervisors by a split vote of the planning commission, but some planning commissioners have said the scheme will only invite lawsuits against the county if it is adopted.

If approved by the board of supervisors and the Coastal Commission, the system would become part of the implementation of the Big Sur Local Coastal Program.

SERIOUSLY question whether the board of supervisors and the planning commission has a handle on this thing," Brunn told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

It distresses me to see a treasured area like Big Sur used for an unproven experiment in land use planning," Brunn said. "I thought the plan put forward by Congressman Panetta — or some version of it could be a good solution."

Brunn referred to a bitterly-fought measure introduced by Congressman Leon Panetta of Carmel Valley to provide federal control over land use in Big Sur. The Panetta bill failed to win Congressional approval.

Although the Measure A planning initiative was defeated in the November election, it signified a profound disgust with county planning processes, Brunn said. Brunn worked actively in support of the measure, which was approved only by voters in Carmel. Measure A would have required local voter approval of master plans in nine planning areas of the county.

"It certainly was not a perfect law, but as a protest statement it had my full support," Brunn said. "It was a protest against the planning process in Monterey County and in the Fifth District. The opponents of Measure A said that if you don't like the plans approved by the board of supervisors, then you should elect someone you like. That's what I'm trying to do by running.

"These are not plans because the people have had insufficient involvement in the process," Brunn said, with reference to the Carmel Valley, Big Sur, and Del Monte Forest plans. "It seems the development interests in the Carmel Valley Master Plan and the Del Monte Forest coastal plan have prevailed."

Brunn said he agrees with a recommendation by the Board of Directors of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association that construction of a "scenic roadway" through Hatton Canyon would be preferable to widening of Highway 1 or other alternatives to relieve traffic congestion at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Traffic volume, according to 1981 figures cited by Brunn, amounted to 33,000 vehicle trips daily between Carmel Hill and the Carmel River. Brunn said he "leans toward" construction of a roadway through Hatton Canyon, if that road can be designated as a scenic route and not a freeway.

Brunn said he would be a "full-time supervisor" if elected, and indicated he feels very positive about his prospects.

"I wouldn't be considering this if I didn't feel the people of this district need better representation," 3runn said.

Carmel council fights for coastal conservationist

Absent were Mayors Charles Villegas of Gonzales, Robert Franco of Del Rey Oaks and Lance McClair of Seaside.

Mayor Townsend told the Carmel City Council Nov. 16 that she did not expect the appointment to be made during the mayors' meeting. The mayor also said she opposed the nomination because she wanted to first discuss it with the council before she voted.

The Carmel City Council unanimously rejected the mayors' committee nomination of Mrs. Bedesem. At the urging of Councilwoman Helen Arnold, the council selected Santa Cruz County Supervisor Gary Patton as its choice as central region representative.

City councils do not have specific authority to make an official nomination, which is usually handled by the Mayors' Selection Committee. If a council opposes the committee's nomination, its only recourse is to write Assemblyman Brown directly. The Carmel City Council unanimously decided to appeal to Brown.

"I don't know Helen Bedesem or her political philosophy personally, but I do know Grace McCarthy," Mrs. Arnold told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

GRACE McCarthy has not really been protective of our coast. She has been more oriented to growth and development. If she picks her successor, I know that person will follow her philosophy," Councilwoman Arnold said.

Mrs. Arnold said she is familiar with the machinations of the Coastal Commission. She has followed the votes and is in attendance when the meetings are held nearby. She also went through the Coastal Commission use permit process in 1977 when she built her home in Carmel.

Mrs. Arnold is also concerned that recent appointments to the Coastal Commission have swayed its philosophy from conservation to pro-development.

"It's of a great concern to the council. We're all strong supporters of a conservation-minded Coastal commission," Mrs. Arnold said. "The philosophical balance has changed from people in favor of coastal preservation to people in favor of development. That's why the appointment is so crucial."

The three county boards of supervisors

SANTA CRUZ County Supervisor Gary Patton is supported by the Carmel City Council for appointment to the state Coastal Commission.

been asked by state Assembly Speaker Willie Brown to nominate a prospective appoint-Monterey County supervisors plan to continue a policy of not making a nomination, according to Steve Slade, administrative assistant to Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley.

Slade said past policy indicates supervisors do not want to become involved with appointments because the county still has and the mayors' selection committee have several Local Coastal Programs before the commission for approval.

Seaside will also probably not go along with the nomination of Mrs. Bedesem, according to that city's mayor, Lance McClair.

McClair said the council is expected to write Brown and recommend newly-elected Councilman T.J. Polite to the post.

"I know knothing about the lady (Mrs. Bedesem) personally. I would have to sit down and talk with her. I am not an advocate against her," McClair explained.

McClair said he favors Polite because the councilman has a master's degree in public administration and is "extremely knowledgeable" about the affairs of government. Polite is a bailiff with the Monterey County Sheriff's Department.

Mrs. McCarthy's successor must be a member of a board of supervisors, city council or be a mayor, according to appointment guidelines established by the state legislature.

MRS. MCCARTHY has resigned her position as central coast district representive because she did not run for re-election to the Pacifica City Council. She held one of the seats on the commission reserved for elected officials.

Assembly Speaker Brown, a San Francisco Democrat, is expected to make the appointment by early January, according to Ed Bielski, assistant public information officer for the Coastal Commission.

The Legislature has divided appointments to the 12-member Coastal Commission between the governor, speaker of the Assembly and the Senate Rules Committee, Bielski told this newspaper.

Each is allowed four appointments. Two must be elected officals and the other two selections are members of the general public, he explained.

Santa Cruz Supervisor Gary Patton is supported by the Carmel council because of his staunch pro-conservation record and what they perceive as Mrs. McCarthy's prodevelopment voting record.

"The real heart of it is that the person (Mrs. McCarthy) trying to get her (Mrs. Bedesem) appointed is not real interested in conserving the coast," Councilman David Maradei said.

Councilman Frank Lloyd recalled the 1981 Carmel City Council nomination of conservationist Bob Garcia of Santa Cruz to the Coastal Commission and said it parallels the present situation. Mrs. McCarthy was favored by Speaker Willie Brown over Gar-

"It's always struck me that Bob Garcia and Gary Patton are really wide awake and feel that protection of the coast is so important for all of us," Lloyd said.

Carmel relies heavily on the tourist trade and if its scenic coast is opened to development, the visitors may take their vacation dollars elesewhere, Lloyd fears.

Councilman Robert Stephenson said he supports Patton because Mrs. Arnold has recommended his appointment.

"Helen Arnold and I don't always see eyeto-eye, but I have tremendous respect for her on (Coastal Commission) matters and we usually agree," he said.

Mayor Townsend also supported Patton on the basis of Mrs. Arnold's comments. Also, testimony by Jean Grace at the council session helped sway her opinion, the mayor said.

"I think he's in favor of reasonable preservation and development," said Mrs. Grace, who is a coastal geographer and member of the Carmel General Plan Advisory Committee. "I think he will have the preservation of the coast uppermost in his mind."

Patton is the best candidate, fellow Santa Cruz County Supervisor Joe Cucchiara believes.

WE JUST feel he would be the best representative for the Coastal Commission. There is no better appointment in my mind." Cucchiara told this newspaper.

Patton, in a telephone interview with the Pine Cone/Outlook, said offshore oil drilling is a major threat to the future of the coastline.

"The Coastal Commission is now basically the only agency that has a chance to stop offshore oil drilling," he said.

Interior Secretary James Watt has proposed to open up the California coast for oil and natural gas exploration.

Council narrows the search for a new city administrator

By MICHAEL GARDNER

CARMEL CITY Clerk Jeanne Kettelkamp will serve as acting city administrator if the position is not filled before City Administrator Douglas Peterson leaves his post Dec. 31.

The appointment of Ms. Kettelkamp was made by the Carmel City Council in executive session Nov. 16.

"I think Jeanne is well acquainted with the functions of the city and the individuals involved," Peterson told the Pine Cone/-Outlook last week. "She and I have worked very closely together on matters before the city and the council.

"I think she will be able to keep the ship on a good course with the assistance of the department heads. I think the council action to so designate Jeanne is testimony to the confidence and trust that the city council has in her abilities," he added.

Ms. Kettelkamp was appointed Carmel city clerk in November of 1980. Before she joined the staff, she worked for five years in the city clerk's office in Monterey. Ms. Kettelkamp is a graduate of the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana and also attended a private women's college in Jacksonville, Ill.

As part of her Carmel city clerk duties, Ms. Kettelkamp assumes the role of city administrator while Peterson is out of town for an extended period of time.

"It was a real surprise to me. I consider it a great honor. I see my role as continuing to do most of the functions that I have done in the past and relying on the fantastic staff we have here at city hall. I will just be here to work with them and will depend on them very much," she told this newspaper.

Ms. Kettelkamp said she does not believe she will play the role of city administrator for very long. "Two weeks to a month at the most. I really feel that the new city administrator will be on board soon."

Ms. Kettelkamp added that she did not apply for the permanent city administrator

Peterson announced in late September that he would resign effective Dec. 31. The 32-year-old Peterson said he may go back to school and travel.

Peterson joined the city in 1978 as finance director. He was promoted to acting city administrator in 1979 to replace Jack Collins, who had resigned. Five months later, the council appointed Peterson full-time city administrator.

WHEN COLLINS resigned four years ago, the council placed advertisements in professional journals and several major East Coast newspapers, such as the Wall Street Journal, New York Times and The Washington Post. More than 500 applications were received.

This year, the recruitment search is on a more limited scale with advertisments placed in just three professional journals. There has, nevertheless, been a strong response.

"They're coming in from just about everywhere," Mayor Charlotte Townsend said. "We have had them from the East Coast, the Midwest, the Pacific Northwest, Hawaii, Panama and of course California."

Mayor Townsend and Councilman David Maradei were appointed by the council as a screening committee for the applications. They have recommended that the original field of 112 applicants be narrowed to 28.

All of the council members have the applications and were expected to complete the initial selection early this week.

Maradei believes that a successful applicant will have to be cognizant of problems that face a small coastal community.

"We're looking for someone who is familiar with coastal communities, who is concerned about the environment and who knows California law," he told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

The council should get firsthand knowledge of the 28 applicants soon, since the city general plan questionnaire will be sent to them for a general response.

This summer the council authorized a questionnaire that was mailed to the 3,900 registered voters in the city. The questionnaire asked for opinions on such issues as parking, housing, and controls on touristoriented businesses.

"Resumes are so cold and informal. You don't get to know the person. This way we will know even more about the person and how they perceive our problems," Mrs. Townsend said.

Mayor Townsend hopes the questionnaire responses will narrow the field to between 10 and 15 applicants. A deadline of Nov. 30 has been set for return of the questionnaire responses. The council will then have to decide on how many applicants they wish to invite for oral interviews.

The mayor said the position will pay in the $30,000-per-year range. "That's negotiable depending on their experience. Some of the people who have applied make a bunch more than that," she said.

favor Watt's proposal, Patton explained.

Patton pointed out that the state only has jursidiction over the first three miles of ocean. The federal government owns rights to the remaining U.S. waters and land under

The snag to Watt's plan is that federal law prohibits development if it is not consistent with state coastal management plans. The Coastal Commission decides whether the offshore oil drilling is consistent with those pro-

Patton said a pro-development commission could make it easier for oil companies to drill off shore.

"I think that (Wattt's plan) is a very great danger, particularly with the new governor who wants to abolish the Coastal Commission or put people on it that are prodevelopment," Patton said.

The 39-year-old Patton has been a Santa Cruz County Supervisor since 1974. He served on the Central Coast Regional Coastal Commission from 1975 to 1978, when he was not reappointed by supervisors.

'They favored big growth and big development and removed me because I was too environmentally concerned," he said.

The nine regional commissions were dismantled on July 1, 1981 after the legislature failed to pass a measure that would have allowed them to continue. The statewide Coastal Commission now conducts all coastal business.

The coastal initiative passed by voters in 1972 as Prop. 20 established the Coastal Commission and its primary functions. As part of the act, the regional boards were scheduled to be discontinued in 1981.

PATTON HAS also served on the Santa Cruz Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO), and is a member of the Monterey Bay Joint Air Pollution Control District and the state Air Resources Control Board.

Mrs. Bedesem and Mrs. McCarthy said in telephone interviews they do not understand why they have been labeled by the Carmel council as pro-development.

"That's interesting because up here I'm called an environmentalist and Santa Cruz calls me a developer," said Mrs. Bedesem, who is a professor of music at San Francisco State University.

"I'm right smack in the middle. I'm not against development and I'm not against people either," she said. "I think the purpose of the Coastal Commission is to save the coast so that all people can enjoy it."

Mrs. Bedesem, who also served on the regional coastal panel, added that she is "terribly opposed" to offshore oil drilling along the California coast.

The 58-year-old Bedesem is a member and former mayor of the Half Moon Bay City Council, a coastal community of about 7,200 people about 110 miles north of Carmel. She has also served on an airport committee and regional planning committee for San Mateo County.

For the past year, she has been Mrs. Mc-Carthy's alternate on the Coastal Commission.

Mrs. McCarthy describes herself and Mrs. Bedesem as "middle of the road people."

"Both of us have a long history of securing open space and parklands in our area," Mrs. McCarthy said. "I would say we are both middle of the road people."

Claims by Santa Cruz and Carmel officials that she is pro-development are false, Mrs. McCarthy said.

"I don't think that's true. As far as development is concerned, we haven't promoted it, but we have supported it in urbanized area to keep the open space open," Mrs. McCarthy said.

Mrs. McCarthy nominated Mrs. Bedesem for appointment because "I have worked with her for three years and I know her well. She's able, intelligent and knows the Coastal Act well and our philosphy is pretty much the same."

Claims that they favor the disbanding of the state Coastal Commission are also not true, both women asserted.

The two told this newspaper that it would be "politically impractical" to shut down the commission.

They do, however, favor limiting its duties once all of the county and city local coastal programs are finally approved.

MRS. MCCARTHY pointed out that Prop. 20 envisioned local control over the coast once local land use plans are completed. The Coastal Commission should act as an appeals board and review the local programs every five years, she added.

"I have great faith in local government. That's who should have control over any development on the coast," Mrs. McCarthy said.

Mrs. Bedesem agrees: "I think politically it's not possible to disband the commission. The people of California want it. Until we work it out so the local coastal programs are approved, the commission should have the authority it now has."

Newly-elected Gov. George Deukmejian supported discontinuation of the Coastal Commission during his gubernatorial campaign. It is still uncertain whether he will carry out that promise once he takes office in January.

"He said the California Coastal Commission would be one of the first things to go," said Deukmejian's spokesman Kevin Brett in a recent interview with The San Francisco Examiner.

"He was opposed to Prop. 20 in 1972 and the act extending it in 1976. He says that the commissioners are not accountable to the electorate while the city councils and boards of supervisors are accountable. It's consistent with his desire to return power to local control," Brett added.

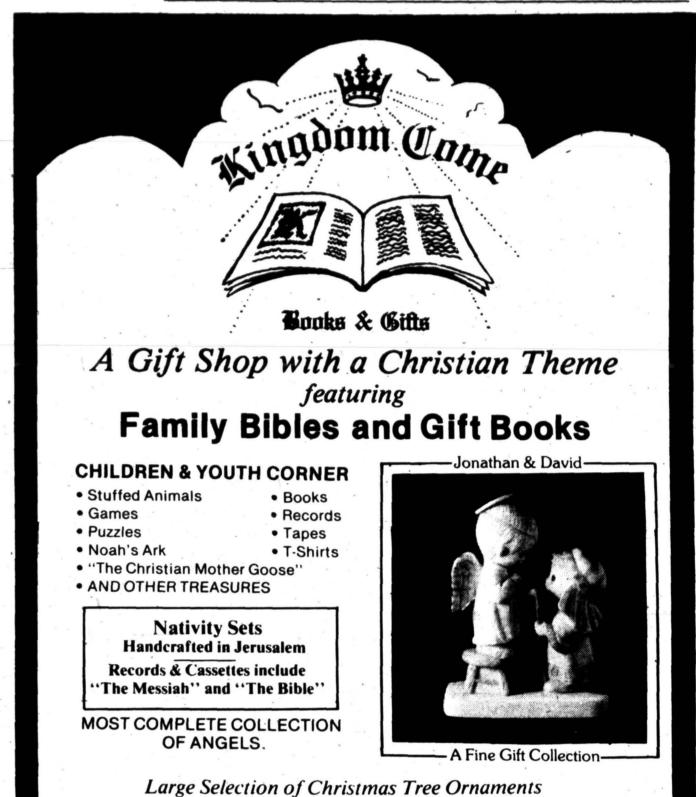

The Carmel Area Local Coastal Program — which covers the unincorporated area around the city of Carmel, has been conditionally approved by the Coastal Commission. It was reviewed by commission staff in Santa Cruz and sent back to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors for revisions, which are expected to be completed early next year.

The City of Carmel Local Coastal Program, which covers the portion of Carmel within the jurisdiction of the Coastal Act, has been certified by the state.

Monterey Mayor Gerald Fry, who supports the nomination of Mrs. Bedesem, is angered by the Carmel council opposition. He is also upset about the council comments that Mrs. McCarthy favors disbanding the Coastal Commission.

"To say that Grace McCarthy is anti-Coastal Commission is a real disgraceful thing to say," he told this newspaper. "She has worked for many years on the Coastal Commission. This statement is way out of line."

Asked why he supports the nomination of Mrs. Bedesem, Fry replied: "I support the lady because Grace McCarthy supports the lady and Jim Hughes supports her."

Hughes is a member of the Pacific Grove City Council and former member of the regional coastal commission board for this PACIFIC GROVE Mayor Florus Williams said Hughes also convinced him to support Mrs. Bedesem during the Mayors' Selection Committee meeting Nov. 12.

The Carmel City Council Nov. 16 unanimously authorized City Administrator Doug Peterson to write a letter of protest to Williams, who is chairman of the committee.

Council members are concerned that the hastily-called meeting may have been used to stop any opposition to Mrs. Bedesem.

Nine of the mayors met in Marina Nov. 12 for what Carmel Mayor Charlotte Townsend thought was the routine monthly meeting of the heads of area cities.

The agenda also listed nominations for appointments to two minor county committees as part of the session. The agenda did not propose that the committee nominate a person for appointment to the Coastal Commission.

The meeting notice was received by the city of Carmel Nov. 5, despite the fact that the Mayor's Selection Committee by-laws require at least a two-week notice. To comply with the requirement, the notice would have had to have been received one week earlier.

Mrs. Townsend attended the meeting anyway and gave little thought to the short notice until Williams announced that the mayors needed to select a nomination for appointment to the commission.

"It came as a complete surprise to me. Some of the mayors did not even receive notification," she said. "Possibly, if we had been given proper notice, some of the other mayors may have been there."

Expediency was the reason the nomination was suggested during the meeting, Williams said.

Brown, in a letter to the committee, asked that nominations be sent to him no later than Dec. 9. "I did it for the sake of expediency. Many of these people are in business and can't come to meetings all of the time," Williams said. "I didn't want a meeting in December because it's the holidays and everyone is going to be busy."

Williams pointed out that he does not plan to call another meeting until January.

"This is all much ado about nothing. The vote would be the same. Why drag everyone out for a five minute meeting?" he questioned

The 7-2 vote for Bedesem was the bare majority necessary for nomination. A change in one vote would mean that she would not have received the necessary number needed for nomination.

Seaside Mayor Lance McClair said he did not attend the meeting because of a calendar mixup.

McClair said another mayor told him

'It's of a great concern to the council. We're all strong supporters of a conservation-minded Coastal Commission,' Mrs. Arnold said. 'The philosophical balance has changed from people in favor of coast preservation to people in favor of development. That's why the appointment is so crucial.'

about the meeting. Kemp said the city never received a notice of the meeting, but pointed out that it may have gone to former Mayor Glenn Olea, who was defeated by McClair in the November election.

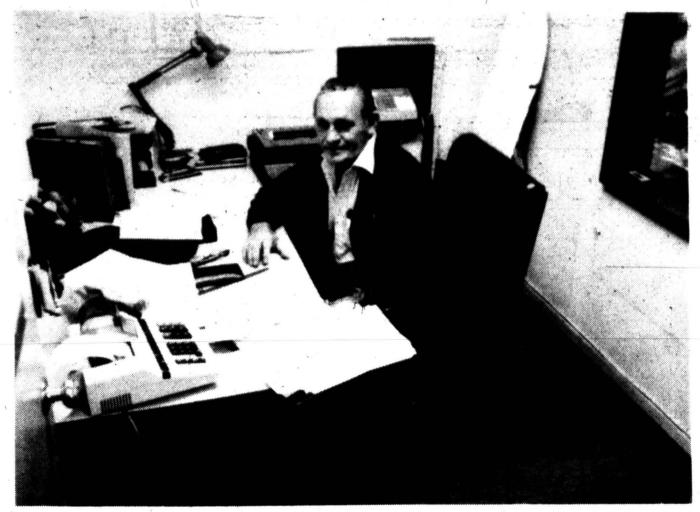

"I'm not a person who believes in conspiracy. I think he did it out of expediency," Mrs. Townsend said.

Other Carmel council members are concerned about the vote.

"The people who are experienced and smooth are going to take advantage of others who are not very smooth," Mrs. Arnold said.

"Some of the mayors around here are a lot more development-oriented," Stephenson added.

CARMEL PLANNING Director Robert Griggs works in a seven by five foot office in city hall. A lack of adequate office space and the need for increased maintenance are the primary reasons why the city council wants to spend $130,000 on remodeling the structure on Monte Verde Street. (M.G. photo.)

City hall remodeling project costs double

THE MONTEREY architectural firm of Keeble and Rhoda was selected Nov. 16 by the Carmel City Council to develop schematic drawings for a $130,000 city hall remodeling project.

The project will be twice as extensive and cost twice as much as a proposal presented to the council a little more than one year ago.

In late October of 1981, the city council appropriated about $65,000 for a "stop-gap" repair and remodeling project, according to Carmel City Administrator Doug Peterson.

"The original plan was much more modest in scope. Before, it was a staff-proposed, stop-gap kind of measure," Peterson told the Pine Cone/Outlook last week.

Funds for the original project had been allocated by the 1981 council but the work

The council has budgeted $130,000 for the project: $12,500 for repairs and additional maintenance, $50,000 for computer equipment, $15,000 for office furniture and $5,000 for a new sound system never began. In June of 1982, Mayor Charlotte Townsend, David Maradei and Robert Stephenson were elected to the coun-

The new council determined that it would be better to completley remodel city hall rather than just do a "patchwork" job. Peterson said.

The original $65,000 proposal would have included the addition of 576 sq. ft. of office space on the south side of city hall to provide larger offices for the building inspector and planning director.

Planning Director Robert Griggs currently works out of an office that measures approximately seven by five feet.

The plan would also have added windows and better lighting. For example, Finance Director James Bajari's office does not have windows.

Peterson pointed out that the Carmel General Plan Advisory Committee also has supported a complete renovation of city hall.

The committee, during its review of the public facilities element of the general plan, recommended that city hall be remodeled, he added.

The council has budgeted $130,000 for the project. Other related costs that have been authorized include: $12,500 for repairs and additional maintenance, $50,000 for computer equipment, $15,000 for office furniture and $5,000 for a new sound system in the council chambers.

Architect George Keeble said he cannot predict when the schematic drawings will be completed.

"We don't know the scope of the work that needs to be done. The first thing we will do is meet with city hall people and see what kind of work we're talking about," he said.

Council members have limited the cost of the architectural drawings to 15 percent of the total remodeling bill, or approximately

Once the plans are approved, the council must go out to bid for the project, Peterson pointed out.

City hall is on the east side of Monte Verde

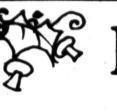

Street, between Ocean and Seventh avenues. The building was originally built for $300 in 1921 as an Episcopal Church.

After Carmel was incorporated on Oct. 31, 1916, city hall was located on a second story above the old Carmel Bakery (now the Wooden Horse Toy Store), on the west side of Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

The church and the city reached an agreement in 1947 for the purchase of the property for $30,000. The city officially moved into the building on Dec. 28, 1950.

Former mayor and longtime resident Barney Laiolo explained that after initial remodeling, there have been no real major structural changes except when the planning department wing was added in the mid-1960s.

Carmel school district wants students to learn computers

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

COMPUTERS are not new to the Carmel Unified School District; however a special committee has drawn up plans that would give every student a chance to learn how to use one before graduation.

The extensive proposal will be presented to the board of education at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 30 in Room 2 of Carmel High School.

"What we are trying to do first of all is give a structure to the use of the computers the district has, and secondly purchase enough so that all students will have the opportunity to use the computers," committee chairman and Carmel Middle School Principal Frank Lynch told the Pine Cone/-Outlook last week.

The committee, which has worked on the proposal since early fall, consists of parents, teachers and administrators.

The first phase of the proposed program envisions the expenditure of $50,000 in the 1983-84 school year. Those funds would be used to buy 20 computers for the high school and three for Carmel Valley High School. An additional $30,000 is proposed for staff salaries, Lynch said.

The second phase in 1984-85 envisions the expenditure of $37,000 for 15 computers that would be placed at the middle school. An additional $19,000 would be needed for staff computer in 1985-86 as part of the third phase of the program. The cost would be $12,000. Additional funds would not be necessary because the teachers could instruct the computer course as part of their normal duties, Lynch added.

The committee acknowledges that district financial resources are limited, but grant funds and donations from private computer firms could help fund the program, Lynch said.

Recent state legislation allows computer firms tax breaks in return for donations of used machines to public schools, he pointed out.

The committee proposal will also outline a basic district-wide curriculum program for computer education.

Computer instruction in grades kindergarten through five would be limited to computer awareness and basic education on uses for the machine.

At the middle school level, the students would be introduced to programming and computer literacy.

By the time a student attends high school, he would be able to take advanced programming courses. There would also be vocational course offerings such as word processing, Lynch said.

THE ADULT education students would use the computers at the other schools. Those classes would focus on vocational training and personal financial management.

"The students would not be limited by the course curriculum. Especially at the middle school and high school level I see students using the computers on a drop-in basis at a more advanced level," Lynch said.

'Right now we have students at the middle school who have their own personal computers and will no doubt need more advanced instruction and challenges."

Lynch said teachers would also have the opportunity to learn how to operate the computers and use them.

"It is our intent to keep all of the computers going for as long as we can keep them going, from before first period in the morning to late at night for adult education," he said

Computers are not unique to the district, but there are so few that most of the students have not had an opportunity to explore the uses.

Captain Cooper School in Big Sur, which has a kindergarten through fifth grade student body, has a computer.

Tularcitos School in Carmel Valley, another K-5 program, just received its first computer last week. Principal Mary Jane Stanford said she will meet with staff to determine the best possible use for the Apple

Funds for the computer, and several others for the district, came from a special federal grant, Mrs. Stanford said.

In addition, parents headed by Laura Scott and Leanna Scott (unrelated) have helped raise funds for computer equipment through special activities.

One of these activities is movie nights at the school. Last Friday, several Charlie Chaplain shorts and the original Flash Gordon serials numbers one and two were screened. Adults paid $2 and children $1 for admis-

River School at the southern city limits of Carmel has three computers, according to Principal Vance Frasier.

The computers are used in a variety of methods, including introduction for fifth graders. Several of the learning impaired students also perform tasks on the computer.

Carmel Middle School offers a non-credit after school course on its five computers, Lynch said.

The one-hour "computer awareness" class is offered in 16 day program blocks under the direction of teacher Jay Criddle. The curriculum is basically programming, Lynch explained.

EVEN CARMEL High School has a limited computer education program. Only one class is offered and that is on an independent study basis.

John Durein teaches the independent study course in computer education. The students are assigned tasks on the computers on an individual basis. They then meet with Durein to review their progress before school, at lunch or after classes end for the day.

"It's still not a real good program because it's so hard for me to meet with students and give them the help they need," Durein explained. "It's so hard to talk to the kids and I'm sure they feel the same way."

The class focuses on mathematics.

"I'm really teaching it as a math class. They learn to program so they can do math. I'm not intending to turn kids out to be computer programmers," he said.

The Carmel High School schedule last year offered a one period computer education course. However, that class was cancelled this year because of budget constraints.

Durein understands the financial problems of the district.

"If you look at all the needs we have in the district, this may be a low priority," he said. "If we had the financial resources, I would certainly make it a priority."

Sophomore Walt Masten, who is enrolled in the independent study course, agrees with his teacher.

"I think the class is great. I really like programming. I think we need a regular class because there isn't enough time for us all to use the machines. Sometimes it's really hard to get time on the computers," he said.

Chuck Phillips, director of the high school Regional Occupational Program (ROP), believes that the students would be better served by a local program.

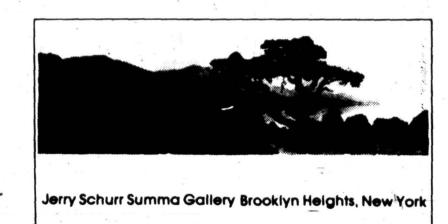

Currently, four high school students attend a ROP computer education course in Pacific Grove.

"They do a good job, but I just think we could offer a lot more for all of the students," Phillips explained.

Council to consider hiring full-time Carmel zoning enforcement officer

THE CARMEL City Council will consider hiring a full-time zoning enforcement officer when it meets in a special session at 4 p.m. Nov. 30 at city hall.

"There's very little sense of the planning commission functioning as a planning commission if the zoning ordinances are not upheld. They are not being upheld by the citizens voluntarily," Planning Director Bob Griggs told the Pine Cone/Outlook to explain why he feels the position is necessary.

"First of all, we need a patrol in the downtown area to handle sign complaints. Illegal signs are a major concern to the community," Griggs said.

A common residential violation of city codes is the placement of "no parking" signs on fences. This is prohibited, Griggs pointed

City codes place restrictions on size, type and color of signs. Signs must be approved by the board of adjustments.

Other common infractions include paint a building without permission, painting it the wrong color, changing the use of a business without city approval, the illegal addition of motel units, and rental of "second kitchens," Griggs said.

The new employee would also work with City Atty. George Brehmer on court prosections of violators, he added.

All violations of city building and zoning codes are now handled on a "complaint only" basis. The city does not have an employee who inspects residential and commercial zones to determine if there are violations of codes, the planning director explained.

Chief Building Inspector Ron Warren and Building Inspector Butch Maloney are now responsible for the enforcement of city code policy. However, Griggs said their present duties do not allow them enough time adequately to enforce the regulations.

Asked how soon he would like the position to be filled, Griggs replied "yesterday." However, he admitted that an enforcement officer probably could not be hired until ear ly next year.

Griggs first submitted a proposal for the position during budget hearings this summer. Council members decided to delete the position from the 1982-83 budget.

However, a couple of city committees refused to let the proposal be dropped.

The Carmel General Plan Advisory Committee, during its review of revisions to the general plan, said a zoning enforcement officer is necessary to carry out city laws.

"Why should the planning commission make decisions if they do not have the means to enforce them?" committee member Jean Grace asked during the July meeting.

An ad hoc committee of business people headed by Planning Commission Chairwoman Sandy Swain has also notified the council that it wants the city to hire an enforcement officer.

Council members heard a report from City Administrator Doug Peterson Nov. 16 on a possible job description for the new position.

Class is offered arthritis victims

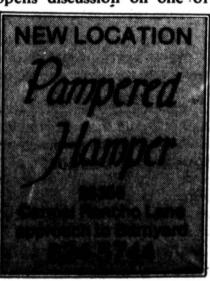

For the past six weeks, 20 individuals who suffer from arthritis have been meeting at the Oldemeyer Center in Seaside each Wednesday to participate in an arthritis selfhelp course. The course in a "how-to" class to better understand and manage the disease.

Madeleine Haskell, a Carmel resident, leads the class each Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 12 noon. She is certified by the Arthritis Foundation and works as a volunteer with Joan O'Hara who is the branch manager for the Arthritis Foundation on the Monterey Peninsula. Mrs. O'Hara is also certified as a ASHC leader and is on the staff of the Foundation.

Mrs. Haskell, herself an arthritis sufferer, said the selfhelp course lasts for six weeks and covers all the basic principles of arthritis management. The general outline for the course is developed by the Stanford Arthritis Center, yet each class varies as emphasis is placed on individual participation. Since the various forms of arthritis manifest differently in each person, the course is individually tailored.

The course covers a variety of topics including: The disease process (a discussion on just what arthritis is), exercise and joint protection ("range-of-motion" exercises are demonstrated with detailed charts showing the benefits), stress management and relaxation (coping with the pain and frustration), psychosocial aspects (which deals with relationships, emotions and related problems), evaluating non-traditional treatments and products and discussion of nutrition.

In a typical session four long tables seating five people each encircle two large exercise mats which are used during the exercise portion. Books, pamphlets, printouts and homework are all part of the course. At the beginning of each session Mrs. Haskell opens discussion on one of the topics, and allow each person to share his or her experiences.

Depression, and how each person deals with it, is an example of one of the openlydiscussed topics. Sister Claude Crinnion, a participant, works with families throughout the peninsula. She told the group how she deals with depression by leading the class through one of the relaxation meditations she often uses with her families. As these intimate areas are brought out, the group learns they are not alone with their disease and its problems, and that individuals, by sharing with each other, a whole new and effective therapy.

One of the important aspects of the arthritis selfhelp course is the open acknowledgement of having the disease and then actively doing something about it. All of the men and women in the class have accepted their arthritis and turned it into an opportunity to learn and share and more effectively manage what they do to and with their bodies, according to Mrs. Haskell.

Lou Peresenyi, one of the participants has been a sports coach on the Monterey Peninsula for 50 years.

Carmel River lagoon flooding leaves residents angry and county puzzled

By ROBERT MISKIMON

ANGRY RESIDENTS in the Carmel River lagoon area blamed Monterey County officials for flooding last Friday which reached at least three homes.

County officials, on the other hand, blamed the sudden flooding on a lack of communication and coordination with other agencies — and on Mother Nature.

The Nov. 19 flooding which over-reached the boundaries of the lagoon evidently was the result of heavy storm runoff into the Carmel River combined with a high tide in Carmel Bay which prevented the river from cutting a swath through the lagoon.

Result was that water overflowed the natural boundaries of the lagoon and at least partially flooded several homes in the area between Mission Ranch Resort and Carmel River State Beach.

Residents were still upset this week over the fact that county public works crews failed to clear a channel for the river to drain into the bay before the flooding backed up in the lagoon. Two residents Bill Goldberg and Elizabeth Sutton took matters into their own hands last Friday and shoveled an opening themselves before a county bulldozer arrived on the scene.

Jack Severin of 26334 River Parks Place arrived home from a trip to Northern California to find the floor of his house about three inches underwater. His reaction was one of "cold fury," he told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

"There must be negligence of some kind, because the state did this for so long without any trouble before the county took it over," Severin said. "If I had known the county had taken this over. I'd have been more concerned about my insurance."

Severin said he, and many other area residents, do not carry federal flood insurance — mainly because they didn't think they needed it. On Monday, Severin tried to assess the damage to his home of 14 years as he cleaned up a soggy mess.

"This just defies logic," Severin said. "To think that the county's only bulldozer was somewhere down near King City, and that they couldn't have gotten six men out there and said: 'Start digging.' The whole thing is unbelievable. The mood here is one of being thoroughly incensed."

HELMER SODERMAN, who lives at 2638 16th Avenue, said the flood waters came up to a fence gate on the property and "we got a little water on our back porch."

Soderman said he has not purchased federal flood insurance because he considers the rates too expensive, and said he does not plan to purchase insurance as a result of the recent flooding.

"If the county was doing what it was supposed to do, this should never have happened." Soderman said. "When just two or three people could go down there with shovels and get the lagoon open — that's supposed to be the county's job.

"The county was not doing what it should have done from its experience. The lagoon is silting in, and they should have been aware of it. The county really dropped the ball," Soderman said.

Jack Davis, a resident of Camino Real who requested that his house number not be published, said his property also sustained damage in the flooding. A converted garage with den was inundated in almost a foot of water, Davis said.

"The county was definitely at fault," Davis told this newspaper. "Somebody from the county engineering department drove up last Friday and admitted it was strictly a result of negligence on the part of the county.

"They were negligent because they didn't monitor it," Davis said.

Owen Stewart, engineer with the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District, said it has been the responsibility of the county public works department to open the mouth of the Carmel River during the rainy season, as part of its-responsibility to protect county roads.

Stewart said the lagoon overflowed quite suddenly because of its gradual filling through siltation and sedimentation in the Carmel River, which is a result of river bank erosion.

"That water was carrying a tremendous amount of sediment load when the lagoon was finally breached," Stewart told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "Extensive erosion along the river is one reason for the sediment buildup in the lagoon.

"Any time you have a stream with a dam on it and controlled flows, the sediments start to build up. If we got higher flood flows on the river, the lagoon would scour itself. I don't know whether dredging of the lagoon is the answer or not. It's certainly one of the things the county will look at.

"That sediment is coming from erosion on the river — probably a lot of it from the Schulte Road bridge area," Stewart added, a reference to serious erosion problems in that stretch of the river.

MO ORRETT, supervising civil engineer with the Monterey County Department of Public Works, said the flooding was the result of sudden storm runoff and a high tide which prevented the lagoon water from breaking through to the bay.

"It used to be that the state parks people would watch and tell us when trouble was coming," Orrett said. "California-American Water Co. used to notify us when the dam started to spill, but they didn't do that this

"The question that needs to be answered is: What is the responsibility of the public purse in this regard. How far do we go 'in pro bono publico?""

Don Wilson, maintenance engineer with the county public works department, said his department has reinstituted an informal arrangement with California-American Water Co. to be notified when the San Clemente dam starts to spill.

"We had an arrangement with the former dam tender, who was eager to help people," Wilson explained. "He has retired and the new guy who took over didn't know about the system. What got us in trouble was that caused by a major storm Nov. 18.

SEVERAL MISSION RANCH neighborhood residents were forced to flee their homes in boats since the exits from in front of the buildings were flooded when the Carmel River lagoon overflowed. Several residents reported damage to their homes and

JON KARACHALE of Carmel found a good vantage point from the fence to oversee the results of the major storm that struck Carmel Nov. 18. The driving rain forced the this time, the lagoon didn't drain itself because of the high tides.

"Normally we would have had a bulldozer in the area," Wilson said. "But we had a road project south of King City but the residents went ahead and opened the lagoon by the time we had called for a second bulldozer.

"You don't open the mouth of the river in anticipation that it might rain," Wilson added. "You open it when there is flow in the river. It happened so suddenly, we didn't know it was coming."

Wilson said his department also has requested that the county flood control district notify his office when stream flows at Robles Del Rio are sufficient to indicate a potential buildup in the lagoon. He also said the primary responsibility of his department is to protect county roads — not private property — from flooding.

"We're basically here to keep the roads open," Wilson said. "But we also wind up with the river mouth because flooding secondarily affects the roads. People wonder why we give them sand bags and tell them we can't fill them up.

"That's because we're really working with road funds. Of course, if we see someone's life is in danger, we will always help out. People get upset when we show up and don't give them filled sandbags, but we're just doing what we're supposed to do."

RESIDENTS OF this house off Carmelo Street woke up to find the water seeping into the addition to their home last Friday, as flood water suddenly rose around the Carmel River lagoon.

RIVER PARK Place, like so many streets just south of the Carmel city limits, was underwater the morning of Nov. 19 following the major storm of the previous day. Some residents of the area were angry at Monterey County officials for their handling of the situation.

Carmel Press changes hands

* By FLORENCE MASON ::::::::::

ONE OF CARMEL'S oldest businesses has changed hands. After 41 years as the owner of Carmel Press, Howard Timbers has retired.

Timbers made it easy for me to interview him. He handed me "a pressing note from Howard Timbers" that read: "Came in 1937 — to Carmel Press, then owned by E.H.H. Watson, Early experience with both the Carmel Cymbal (forerunner of the Pine Cone/Outlook) and Maston's Gazette. Purchased Carmel Press in '41 and have concentrated on letterpress printing ever since.

"Particular memories of work with Hazel Watrous and Dene Denny in the early days of the Bach Festival, Carmel Music Society, Chamber Music and considerable printing for all the churches of Carmel.

"After 45 years, maybe the ink stains will eventually be washed off. But Carmel has been good to us. Long live Carmel."

And long live Howard Timbers, in happy retirement. Up until his last day at Carmel Press, he still rode his bike to work and up and down the hills hear his Carmel Woods home. Now he'll have time for more of the latter. And for more skiing, too! "I'll have time to travel," he said, "and to get my wife (Pauline) out of town now and then."

Those who know Timbers may wonder what will become of his vast collection of hubcaps, a feature of the big, highceilinged room where he has done his work. As youth takes over, in the form of new owner Darryl Kenyon, there is still an appreciation for the building's unique character. Kenyon said he would do some remodeling but that he'll keep at least some of the hubcaps as part of the decor. Kenyon is delighted that there is plenty of room for a new offset press and a new cutter. They should fit through the massive double doors on Seventh Avenue, just east of San Carlos Street.

Kenyon, who is single and from San Francisco, is new to the area and this is the first time he has owned his own business. But he brings more years in the printing field than you might expect: he started at the age of 14. The move means "escaping from urban life" as well as the excitement of having his own business.

There's a "printer's angel" in the picture, too. Jo Ann Holbrook has worked with Timbers for the past 12 years, off and on. She also has a daycare program at Bay School in the afternoons. Of Timbers she says; "I started with him while I was still in high school He is a wonderful boss."

Another Carmel business owner, who wanted to be sure that local residents appreciate "this rare person," described him as a perfectionist. That last week, Timbers said he is even more exacting than he used to be: "I'll stop a press to dot an 'i'." The only things that bothered him recently were things he had no control over, such as getting the supplies he needed. He wasn't sure that others have the same feeling for quality of workmanship.

The man who described himself as like the note he handed me - "short and sweet" - has closed the doors on an illustrious career on the Carmel business scene.

SPEAKING OF RETIREMENT

William Howard is going to retire — again. And play golf. "Every day instead of just three or four times a week!" His partner at Nautilus, Gregory Schafer, finds that keeping up one store is enough for him. So Nautilus has been sold, and Schafer will concentrate on his Handbag Company shop in the same Doud Arcade location. "It keeps me as busy as I want to be," he said.

Nautilus, with wide windows in which shining brass objects, usually with a nautical theme, easily caught the eyes of passersby on San Carlos Street, has been purchased by Reynold Watson. He'll move here from Palm Springs and when he does, we'll have more to tell you about him.

Howard and Schafer, who is also the former owner of Port of Carmel, open Nautilus in May, 1981.

GRIME FIGHTERS

Do you have some grime? On your walls, streets, paths? Wash On Wheels can come to your rescue. That's the message from Robert Burchett, vice president of the Carmel company by that name.

The company has been here four years. It came to our attention because of the work it has just completed at the Barnyard. You probably didn't see the workers in action, as it was done after hours when there was less traffic. But you might have noticed that the wood sidings in the Barnyard have a new, clean look. It was about a two-week job, Burchett said.

He compared the work of his "Grime Fighters" to the process through which a woman goes in putting on her makeup. "You do it on a clean face, of course, washing with hot water first; then you paint."

In the case of the Barnyard, painting was not the object. It was to restore the beauty of the wood sidings. In this climate, the effects of salt water in the air and wind-blown dirt are most troublesome, Burchett said. Another local project was cleaning the sidewalks and parking spaces around Monte

Burchett bought his special equipment in 1979 and it is still "the only hot water system in use in this area," It produces a complete range of washing pressures "from 200 PSI (pounds per square inch) to a mighty 2000 PSI."

The hot water power washing system — using a completely self-contained unit with an automated pumping system and a wide variety of spray wands, brushes, degreasers and cleaning agents — can clean and sanitize building exteriors, fences and decks, masonry patios and walks and pools, even commercial truck and car fleets. Burchett added: "If baby decides to graffiti your home, call us."

He has also had to explain that his trucks, bearing the WOW (Wash On Wheels) logo are not there to do your laundry, dishes, windows or carpets — or to provide diaper service.

Wash on Wheels is a family enterprise. In fact, it was when Burchett was associated with his father-in-law, J.C. Stephens, in the contracting business that he saw and realized the need for such a cleaning service. Now Stephens is president of the company, as well as continuing as a contractor.

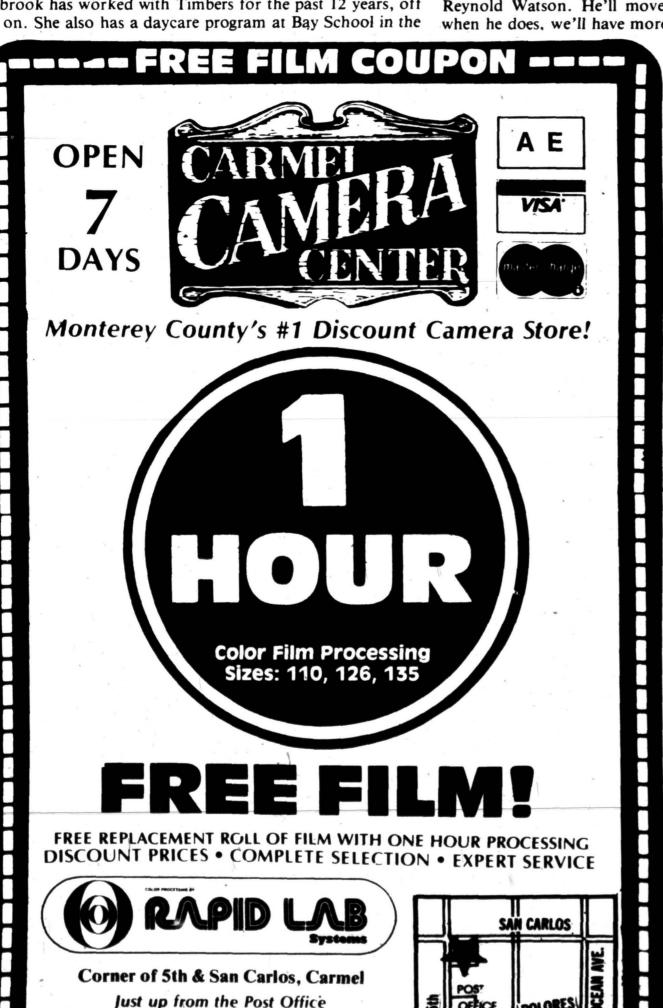

Burchett's wife, Marcia, formerly with American Airlines, also helps with the business.

IT'S STILL OURS

The National Bank of Carmel is growing rapidly, but "It's still the National Bank of Carmel," with the emphasis on ""Carmel."

That's what bank president Don Nelson said, as he confirmed that a new branch office has just opened in Clock Tower Place (on Via Nona Marie in the Carmel Rancho area) and that a second branch will open on Garden Road in Monterey soon after the first of the year.

Nelson said expansion of the nearly two-year-old-bank into the Rancho area was in response to requests as well as "for the growth of the bank."

"There are many people who work in Carmel and live in the Valley, or vice versa," Nelson said, "And there are a lot of merchants and professional people at the mouth of the Valley. Let's face it — many Carmel residents shop there too."

The bank's first branch office is a full service facility, which required a change in the front of the Clock Tower's corner structure to accommodate an automatic teller and night depository.

The Garden Road location developed because "we saw an opportunity there," Nelson said. An informal survey taken by the bank indicated that there are around 4,000 people who work in that area who are not served by any bank or savings and loan company.

In another sign of growth, the National Bank of Carmel is in the process of getting approval to become a bank holding company. Nelson explained: "This allows the bank to provide some additional bank-related services." He did not define those services, saying that it would be premature to do so while the approval was still being sought. The bank's stockholders, as well as the Federal Reserve Board, must give their approval.

In January, 1982, looking back on the bank's first year of operation, Nelson credited its local orientatin for some of its success. "I don't think Carmel actually needed another bank," he said at that time, "but I think our results have shown that the community certainly wanted a locally oriented bank."

Today, Nelson re-emphasizes the local orientation, in spite of the bank's expansion. "It's still the National Bank of Carmel. The main emphasis will stay on the bank here (Dolores Street, south of Seventh). My office is still right here."

MEDIATION

There's a new resource in Carmel for troubled children and adolescents — a woman with two children of her own, regular contact with high school students, and a just-completed ninemonth internship on a crisis intervention team. She is Linda Frank, who has opened an office as Family Mediation Services on Delfino Place in Carmel Valley Village.

Ms. Frank has a master's degree in psychology from the University Without Walls in Santa Monica and just completed her internship with the Monterey Peninsula Youth Project. There she worked with runaways, kids on drugs and problems at school.

At Carmel High School she coordinates the journalism students' material for their monthly page in the Pine Cone/Outlook.

Ms. Frank's Family Mediation Service will be concerned with children and adolescents having a variety of problems. "But I'm sure I'll end up working with both children and parents," she said. "I can also deal with divorce agreements, which are basically custody arrangements."

She'll bring some of her own experience to that phase of her work, as she is the divorced parent of two children. Kristopher and Richard both attend Tularcitos School. This active mother and professional is an avid tennis player and a runner who just completed her first "half marathon."

MOVIE MAKING

Scenes for a major motion picture were filmed in Carmel recently, but few local citizens were out and about early enough to watch the activity.

The picture, Right of Way, stars James Stewart and Bette Davis. No, neither of those stars was in Carmel. Their screen daughter, played by Melinda Dillon, was. She was filmed leaving a house on Scenic Road and then in front of the Normandy Inn.

The company also took some background shots around the area. In addition to its outstanding cast, Right of Way is notable because it is the first full-length, original production for pay TV — in this case, Home Box Office. But not the last; it is one of 20 in production for HBO. The producer is Schaefer/Karpf Productions, based in Culver City. The theme of the film is described as "an older couple and their daughter coming to terms with the later stages of life."

The low-keyed approach to filming in Carmel was appreciated by the Business License and Code Review Board in granting a license to the company. It was made possible because equipment was kept to a minimum: no lights, sound equipment or dollies, just a tripod and one camera. The company started filming at 7:30 in the morning, so traffic — except for a few joggers on Scenic — was not a factor.

The only problem developed when Ms. Dillon drove off south on Scenic while the camera was grinding away, then attempted to return the way she had come. "Wrong way on a one-way street," a Carmel police officer said. But he said it with a smile, escorting her back to the house for the next "take."

BRING YOUR PET AGGRAVATIONS

It's never too late, even during the holiday season, to deal with "trivia, routine and interruptions." At least that's Doug Beauchamp's theory. The Carmel time management consultant will present a seminar on time management Dec. 18 under the auspices of the Management Institute of Monterey.

"This seminar offers practical solutions to some of the most nagging problems you face in your daily work; solutions that you can take back and apply immediately. Bring your pet aggravations," the announcement states.

The seminar will be held at the Monterey College of Law on Pearl Street in Monterey, unless a large enrollment requires a change of location. The fee is $3 (possible $5 if a change in location is required.) The institute is a non-profit organization; the fee is used only to defray costs of materials, reproductions and other expenses.

Neither couple would give way, and tempers flared, until a Carmel police officer — answering the call on a "civil dispute" — came to the sescue. He negotiated a settlement: "Problem resolved," according to the police report.

All ina day's work — if you are a Carmel policeman.

Help for phlebitis

SSSSSSSS By DR. KAREN KIKERSSSSSSSSSS

Most people have heard the word "phlebitis," but many do not understand the seriousness of the condition. Phlebitis means that a vein has become inflamed. Usually a blood clot has formed within it, so that the proper term is thrombophlebitis.

Blood clotting can occur in a vein of the foot or leg (or elsewhere) when the normal flow of blood back toward the heart is slowed considerably, congesting the blood in one special area. It can accompany varicose veins, or may occur following childbirth, surgery, severe disease, or injury.

The clot itself is called a thrombus. Severe disturbance of the clot could result in a part of it breaking away and being carried towards the heart, lungs, brain or other critical spots, endangering life.

Acute phlebitis is accompanied by pain, swelling, and redness in most instances. If it attacks a superficial vein, the area feels hard, swollen, and warm to the touch.

Deep veins can also be affected by a thrombus, causing pain and swelling. The suspicion of phlebitis requires immediate diagnosis, bed rest, and medication.

Prevention of clot formation is possible when legs with varicose veins are supported with elastic stockings or elastic wraps. Support hosiery may serve a very useful purpose in mild to moderate cases.

When a doctor suspects the possibility of a thrombus developing, he may prescribe medication which will keep the blood from forming clots.

The most important advice which can be given anyone who has thrombophlebitis is (1) do not rub or massage the affected area, and (2) to not engage in strong physical activity. These warnings are given by doctors to prevent the patient from doing anything to break off bits of the thrombus, which could then lodge in a vital organ.

An indisturbed blood clot will eventually have channels form through it (canalization) so that ultimately blood will flow through. It will also become scar-like in consistency, so part of it will not break off.

Certain enzymes and/or anti-clotting drugs prescribed by the doctor, carefully applied heat, bed rest, and support for the affected foot and leg all help to minimize serious complications.

Bert Cutino receives award

Monterey restaurateur and Monterey Peninsula College graduate Bert Cutino was named one of this year's "Distinguished Alumni" by the California Association of Community Colleges Nov. 7 at its annual convention in San Jose.

Cutino, with four other graduates of the state's community college system, received the 1982 "Distinguished Alumni Award" in honor of his professional success as well as his contributions to the community and MPC. He was selected from more than 50 nominees, many of whom are well known public figures such as actor Dustin Hoffman and Forty Niners' coach Bill Walsh.

Cutino, who lives in the Jacks Peak area with his wife, Bella, their two sons and a daughter, attended Monterey Peninsula College and graduated with an A.A. degree in 1964.

He has worked in the restaurant business since the age of 13, and joined in partnership with friend Ted Balesteri in 1968 to create the Sardine Factory Restaurant on Cannery Row. The fledgling restaurateurs started with 72 seats and an annual gross revenue of $380,000 and have since expanded the capacity of their restaurant to 200 seats and an annual gross of more than $4 million.

Cutino is chairman and founder of the Culinary Art Show of the California Wine Festival and is on the Adivsory Board of the new MPC culinary program. He has also been active with the college as a guest lecturer and a strong supporter of education in the culinary arts.

Brown to speak at breakfast

The monthly breakfast meeting of the Carmel Business Association will be held at 8 a.m. Dec. 2 at La Playa Hotel, Camino Real and Eighth avenues.

Bill Brown, new owner and publisher of the Pine Cone/-Outlook will be the guest speaker.

The public is invited.

CORRECTION

A typographical error in a Nov. 18 story concerning the relative costs of an Arroyo Seco River dam with a Carmel River dam misrepresented the position of Alfred Gawthrop, a director of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

Gawthrop favors construction of a dam on the upper Carmel River as a future source of water for the Monterey Peninsula, instead of the proposed Arroyo Seco dam.

Gawthrop — as correctly reported in the Nov. 18 article — voted against participation of the water management district in the Arroyo Seco dam project.

New arrivals

Christie Lynne Emmons

Adding happiness to the Carmel home of Timm and B.J. Emmons is baby Christie Lynne who was born at Community Hospital on Oct. 30. Christie arrived at 3:50 p.m., weighed seven pounds, nine ounces and was 20 inches long. She has gray-blue eyes and lots of dark brown hair.

Especially delighted with Christie's arrival is her four-yearold sister, Summer, who "really wanted a baby sister and was determined to name her Christie because that's the name of her best friend," according to her mom.

Christie's grandparents are Mrs. Joan Coulson of Downey and Mr. and Mrs. Vence Emmons of Escondido. Grandma Joan arrived two weeks before Christie's birth and stayed another two weeks to help out with all the baby chores. Grandma and Grandpa Emmons also arrived shortly after Christie's birth to visit with their granddaughter.

Christie's dad is a producer/director and her mom is a professional singer who has worked with Tony Orlando and Dawn, John Denver and other singers.

Christie's parents agree that she is a terrific baby with no bad habits such as crying a lot or partying all night. Dad is very involved in shared-parenting and also makes a point of spending extra time with Summer.

Welcome to the world, Christie Lynne!

CARMEL SCHOOL MARMS BARRED FROM ENTERING BEAUTY CONTEST

School marms in Carmel may have dimpled cheeks and sex appeal, but they won't be allowed to qualify in a beauty contest.

In fact, all teachers of the six neighboring counties will be barred from the pulchritude competition which was scheduled to be held next month during the coast counties convention of the California Teachers Association at Salinas.

At least this was the decision reached this week by Superintendent R.D. Case of Salinas following a conference with other educators in the county who are making arrangements for the convention.

It had been proposed that the fairest of the visiting teachers should be nominated as candidates and the most beautiful selected by a popular vote.

The plans were going right ahead and Carmel instructors, as well as teachers throughout the district, were preparing to participate in the competition. Then, according to word received here, a storm of protest came from various principals.

A conference was called and it was finally decided not to stage the contest. The reason given was that it would be 'beneath pedagogic dignity."

MANNING PAINTING KATHY CROSBY

Carmel artist Sam Manning is expected back in Carmel tomorrow after 10 days in Southern California painting a portrait of Mrs. Bing Crosby (Kathy Grant). Mr. Crosby admired Sam Manning's work which he saw on exhibition here and asked the artist to come South and paint his bride. Mr. Manning is a member of the Carmel Art Association.

NO PLACE IN CARMEL FOR SANTA CLAUS

Acting Postmaster Fred Strong told the Pine Cone this week that it looks as if Santa Claus will have to bypass Carmel this Christmas. The post office has looked all over and can't find a vacant place in town to rent for a package depot.

The old telephone building on Dolores and Seventh that the post office used for the purpose last year is now the resplendent home of Barnet Segal's Building and Loan

The old Pine Cone quarters on Dolores Street have become The Studio.

What's vacant around town? Is Carmel having too much prosperity? Postal receipts, an indication of the community's financial condition, continue to climb.

COACHES PICK 5 LOCAL FOR WATER POLO ALL STARS

Another chapter was written last week about the 1977 Mission Trail Athletic League water polo champions from Carmel High School. League coaches selected five Padre varsity players to the eight-man MTAL all star team.

The Carmel swimmers, all seniors from Carmel Valley, include: goalie Bob Dunn, named best team defensive player, and field players Jeff Mink, best offensive player; Rogue Hattan, varsity captain; Steve Allard; and Ron Gayman.

Two Carmel Valley varsity players also were given honorable mention. Chris Kelly, who received the team's most improved award, and Bob Grant.

sygunnar normerg

AT LAST WEEK'S Carmel City Council meeting, I called attention once more to Carmel City Atty. George Brehmer's charge before the county board of supervisors that the county had violated the existing three-year-old building moratorium by issuing 17 use permits to allow otherwise prohibited new commercialtype structures at the entrance to the Carmel Valley.

Last month, soon after the county board had put its own stamp of approval on what Brehmer had identified as the 17th violation of the existing court-ordered moratorium at the Valley entrance, I urged the Carmel City Council to take the supervisors to court. At last week's city council meeting, I pointed out that the moratorium might remain in effect for a long time and that if the city, after calling attention to what it considered numerous violations, simply allowed the matter to drop, there could be many more of the same kinds of violations approved before the moratorium is lifted.

The Valley entrance is clearly in Carmel's zone-of-influence and what happens there can obviously have an effect upon the city. In the recent questionnaire which city officials sent to all city voters, nearly three out of every four who responded said they wanted the city "to monitor projects outside the City limits but within the zone of influence."

This effort to urge the Carmel City Council to follow up its original complaint against what it considered plain violations of a court-ordered moratorium, reminds me of what San Francisco Chronicle columnist Charles McCabe said in writing about my attempts to save something important in Carmel from demon bulldozers. Said McCabe:

"Norberg is aware of the developers. As in the Tahoe area, and everywhere else that is especially beautiful and desirable developers have the motivation. The motivation is loot. The idealistic folk who oppose them, work in fits and starts. Without continuing economic reason to be in an uproar, they don't continue long enough to be effective."

Since the city of Carmel had started to straighten out something which quite evidently a large majority of Carmel's voters would have wanted to see straightened out — according to that recent questionnaire's results - I said I believed it would be most important to continue in court the straightening-out which so far has not succeeded.

Thinking about the efforts which have been made by many individuals and organization to stop or at least to slow down the commercialization of the Carmel Valley entrance, I decided to look back through an accumulation of studies and reports and newspaper clippings related to that subject.

Going back to the summer of 1949, I found that I had served as organizer and chairman of perhaps the first significant community effort made against the advance of commercial activity into the entrance of the Carmel Valley. This community effort in which such organizations as the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and the Carmel Highlands Association as well as a then-influential Carmel Unincorporated group, reached its crisis time on July 1, 1949, when it prevailed upon the county board of supervisors to reverse its planning commission and to deny what was probably the first sustained attempt to start commercial exploitation of the Valley entrance.

Referring to the surprisingly successful effort of a wholly aroused Carmel and Carmel Valley public, Monterey Herald staff writer, Joe Schoeninger, commenting on the public's campaign, wrote:

"They hadn't missed many bets. Following a mass meeting in Carmel, a transportation pool had been organized even to the extent of establishing a nursery for children of parents wishing to attend. It was quite a victory for individuals and organizations who worked daily for weeks on what had appeared to be a lost cause."

AFTER THAT success in blocking a first significant advance of commercial zoning at the very entrance of the Carmel Valley, there was a prolonged lull in further demand for such commercialization of that Valley gateway. Meanwhile, the many who joined together to oppose the 1949 commercial zoning, and who had been successful, drifted apart and became concerned with many other individual and community concerns. And so, slowly at first, new commercial applications began to surface. Gradually more and more such applications began to find favor with county officials.

During the 1950s I spent much time in scouting work. I was then troop committee chairman of Carmel Boy Scout Troop 32 which was sponsored by the Carmel Rotary Club, of which I was a charter member and the long-time treasurer. I intermittently took a hand in trying to stop what I considered desecration of the beautiful Carmel Valley entrance by the indiscriminate march of commercialization and the filling of an always-threatening Carmel River floodplain with structures and uses which could lead to immense property losses. I did not have time to do so with any real regularity. (And I had, of course, to try to make some sort of a living by operating a travel agency and handling an accounting business on the side.)

It shouldn't be necessary for an informed public constantly to beset the people elected to represent that public on the governing bodies for which they have been chosen.

Also it is not always an actual evil intention on the part of a governing body, or its individual members, which leads to a decision that an informed public, if it had been present and heard, would have wanted to reject. Instead of being due to an evil intention of some kind, a governing body's members can simply become sick and tired of hearing again and again, an part of it.

Whatever the particular reason for bias in favor of some applicant's appeal, an informed public's indifference can lead not just to a public's single small loss but one which can lead to a great pyramid of such losses.

On Feb. 4 1959, the city council of Carmel approved the city's first general plan. This plan dealt with what the city wanted to see happen outside its city limits as well as inside its boundaries. Artichoke growing was mostly what was going on at the Carmel Valley entrance in 1959, and Carmel's first adopted general plan said "it designates a seven-acre area for a planned integrated neighborhood shopping center. The buildings should not only harmonize with each other but should complement the natural features of the Valley entrance."

Today there are many times seven acres of shopping center applicant's repeated plea, and finally accede to it or to some at the Carmel Valley entrance and there has been little evidence of any sustained effort to have the great and growing numbers of buildings either to "harmonize with each other" or in any organized way to "complement the natural features of the Valley entrance."

As San Erancisco Chronicle columnist Charles McCabe said in his newspaper in November 1976, referring to developers: "They have the motivation. The motivation is loot. The idealistic people who can oppose them, work in fits and starts. They don't continue long enough to be effective."

When I spoke last week to the Carmel City Council I was trying to urge it to try to bring to a halt at least during the present court-ordered moratorium, by continuing in court its start to halt what it considers illegal construction at the Carmel Valley entrance and to continue "long enough to be effective," what it started. Here comes the holiday season!

Christmas bazaar draws hundreds

The holiday season was in full swing last Friday evening when hundreds of excited shoppers arrived at the invitational grand opening of the annual Christmas-By-The-Sea-Bazaar held at La Playa Hotel.

The event, put on under the aegis of the Behavioral Sciences Institute, was a huge success, with guests partaking of champagne, punch and hot and cold hors d'oeuvres — and lots of shopping.

There was such a variety of beautiful handmade items for sale that many shoppers arrived with huge bags in which to cart their treasures home. Crochet and knitting needles, sewing machines, paint brushes and other equipment — all in the hands of many extremely creative people — worked overtime to produce the hundreds of items that sold almost as quickly as they were put on display.

The $3,000 in prize money donated by Bud Allen was presented to the winning groups by Allen and Gene England. The grand prize went to the Hospice Booth.

In category 1 (needlework) the prizes were: Cypress Community Church, first; Carmel Foundation, second; and Church of the Wayfarer, third.

Category 2 (machine and hand-sewn children and adult clothing): Church of the Oaks, first; Church of the Wayfarer, second; and All Saints' Lydian Guild, third.

Category 3 (knitting and crochet): Community Church, first; Church of the Wayfarer, second; and Church of the Category 4 (wreaths and wall hangings): Saint Francis Xavier, first; All Saints' Lydian Guild, second; and Carmel Foundation, third, Category 5 (Christmas arrangements): Order of Amaranth, first; Cypress Community Church, second; and Church of the Oaks, third.

Category 6 (toys): Marina Methodist Church, first; Cypress Community, second; and All Saints' Lydian Guild, third.

Honorable mention went to St. Francis Xavier Church. Prizes for Best Booths went to: All Saints' Lydian Guild, first; St. Francis Xavier Church, second; and Church of the Oaks, third.

SCOTTISH SOCIETY'S COLORFUL TARTAN BALL

The Beach and Tennis Club in Pebble Beach will be the scene of a special event Nov. 27 when members of the Scottish Society of the Monterey Peninsula and their guests gather for their annual dinner-dance, the colorful Tartan Ball.

The formal event will begin with no-host cocktails at 6:30 p.m. Dinner will be served at 7:45 p.m.

The bagpipes and drums of the Monterey Ceremonial Pipe Band will provide music during the early evening and will lead the grand march to dinner. Highland dancers, accompanied by the pipes, will be the entertainment portion.

One highlight of the evening will be the presentation of the dish of haggis by the chef, and the traditional ceremony of "The Address to the Haggis."

Joe Tick's Orchestra will play for the ballroom dancing and for the Scottish Country Dancing which will be included during the evening.

The committee planning the ball is headed by Gordon C. Craig of Pebble Beach, deputy president of the Society.

local artists and poets loan their work to the center. The "borrowing" program means that the artists allow their works to hang in the center for a three-month period, after which time the art is rotated. The poets' work is put on tapes which are used at the inpatient facility and at the hospital for the patients.

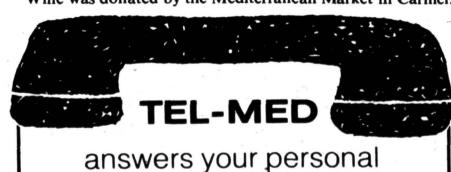

Poets who read their works at the gala included David Thorpe, Nathalie Cole-Johnson, Robert Linn, Horace Mazet, Mary Krainick, Kent Feierabend, Louie Moore, Camilla Buehr, Lois Wilson and Colgate Dorr.

Many of the artists who participated in the program were also there to welcome guests and answer questions. The artists in attendance included Gael Baldock, Les Andersen, George DeGroat, Peggy Olsen, Connie Kirwin, Louis Fragos, Elizabeth Baskerville-McNoughton, Camilla Buehr, and Barbara Bowman.

Chairwomen were head librarian Sandy Larson and Audrey Starr, assistant librarian. Hostesses were Shelley Leo and Peggy Aitkenhead.

The poets who participated in the rotating art-poetry program are members of the Shell Poetry Club. Also participating in the program are photographers Gene Falk and

CO-OWNERS of Chez Serge, Serge Backes and his fiancee, Susan Bunting, were congratulated by Clint Eastwood (center). The open house at the restaurant last Friday evening drew about 500 people.

PRESENT TO WELCOME guests to the grand opening of Chez Serge last Friday evening were from left, Rob McCormick, Barbara McCormick, Serge Backes and his fiancee Susan Bunting. Backes and the McCormicks own the restaurant.

JODI HERMANS and Don Nyman were in happy spirits at the Chez Serge open house.

500 attend opening of Chez Serge restaurant

There's success and then there's success. French champagne, gourmet hors d'oeuvres and about 500 well-wishers definitely put Chez Serge in the latter category.

The elegant restaurant located in the Barnyard was highly praised by the wall-to-wall guests who attended the open house given by restaurant owners Serge Backes and Rob and Barbara McCormick (of McCormick spices) last Friday evening. The party started at 5 p.m. and continued until the stroke of midnight.

Serge is formerly from Avon, Conn. where he owned and operated Chez Serge which won the Four-Star Mobil Award three years in a row. His fiancee — Susan Bunting — was present to welcome guests and will act as evening hostess. Serge, by the way, was born in Nice, France and is a graduate of Cordon Bleu.

Rob and Barbara were also present to welcome guests. Rob owns the Marco Polo leather shop and said he definitely wants to make Carmel his home so he decided to branch out: now he's in the restaurant business.

Barbara, a graduate of the California Culinary Academy in San Francisco, is an expert in the kitchen and is the lunch chef at Chez Serge.

Julie Nyman, day hostess at the restaurant, was in a delightful mood and she and her husband, Don, mingled with the guests.

There were many social events Saturday evening so many of the guests were "making the rounds" and a good portion of them ended the evening at Billy Quon's. Billy's owner, Billy Lee, constantly made rounds to see that everyone was happy.

Guests who wished the new restaurant owners well included Margaret Lowe, Shell Fisher, Linda May, Paul Lippman, Terry McCleary, Archie Schmidt, Dr. Gene England, Tom Fama, Rosemary Topper and ler daughter, Kathleen Incauaglia, Roberto Lupetti, Steve King, Bill Mollring and Bob and Dolores Kaller.

Also sharing a toast with Serge, Susan, Rob and Barbara was Clint Eastwood, who recently wrapped up his new movie The Honkey Tonk Man and is home in Carmel for a bit of R and R. Good-natured Clint posed for a photograph so that Serge could send it home to his mom in France. Serge said she never misses an Eastwood movie so the arrival of the photo will make her day.

As for Chez Serge, I'm no expert on four-star awards but I do know a winner when I see one. Along with the genuine hospitality and delicious French food, it's a great atmosphere.

CARMEL VALLEY WOMEN'S CLUB FASHION SHOW AND LUNCHEON

The Carmel Valley Women's Club will hold a luncheon fashion show at Hacienda Carmel Wednesday, Dec.

Club President Virginia Card promised that the event will be given in a charming setting and that there will be ample space for the models to circulate around the dining tables, and give the audience a close look at the fashion as well as the opportunity to ask questions about materials, prices and such.

Those who wish further information should call Mrs. Guildford at 659-4276.

HOWARD TIMBERS, owner of Carmel Press for the past 42 years, was honored at a retirement party recently. With Timbers was his wife, Pauline.

DWIGHT AND DOROTHY BENNETT, owners of Ailing House Pest Control, gave the retirement luncheon for Howard Timbers.

NEW OWNER of Carmel Press, Darryl Kenyon, shared a toast with his assistant Jo Ann Holbrook who also worked for Timbers.

Retirement party given Howard Timbers

In 1937, Howard Timbers went to work at Carmel Press as a salesman. Three years later, in 1940, Howard bought the company form its owner Eugene Watson.

Now, 42 years later, Howard had decided that it's time to let someone else work and worry while he loafs and does a bit of traveling.

Howard, who owns the building where Carmel Press is located, was guest at a retirement party in one of the building's upstairs apartment/offices on Nov. 15.

The party was given by Dwight and Dorothy Bennett, owners of Ailing House Pest Control, located in Howard's Carmel Press building.

Among the guests at the party was Howard's wife, Pauline, who said she is delighted that Howard is retiring "so we can travel and see all the things I've always wanted to see."

Darryl Kenyon, the new owner of Carmel Press, also attended the party as did Jo Ann Holbrook, who worked for Howard and will continue to work for Darryl.

Others who dropped by to congratulate Howard and enjoy the luncheon catered by Coniglio Catering included Herb and Roxana Blanks, Marian Ann and Gene Scheffer, Margo Stevens, Ernestine Shepard, Marie Mitchell, Janice Bilodeau, Antoine Crivello, Steve Schwartz, James Ovellette, Terry Bloomer, Stan Woodward, Joe O'Hara, Bob Stephenson and Dave Knox.

With all the loafing and traveling, Howard also plans to continue with his favorite hobby which is collecting hubcaps. More than 400 of the shiny "wheels" still hang on the walls of Carmel Press. Now Howard will have to decide where he's going to put them.

GREG AND PAM ARE HOME FROM HAWAII

Ask any local and they'll tell you that some of the best hamburgers in town are created at Friar Tuck's Restaurant—but somehow they taste just a wee bit better now that Tuck's owner, Greg Cellitti and his lovely Pam, are home from a week of fun and sun in Hawaii, on the island of Maui.

Many Carmelites head for that part of the world this time of year, so it's not surprising that Greg and Pam ran into Dick and Harriet Scofield, who were spending time in their condo on Maui.

Greg loves tennis and golf, and spent much of his time doing just that while Pam caught up on snorkling and scuba diving. Pam said the weather was great for the first four days but then the rains came.

Tan and rested, they arrived home in time to greet Pam's mom, Anne Henderson, who visited from Chatham, Mass. Anne also has a home in Carmel so she plans to spend the next five or six months here. Her friends gave Anne a round of parties, and Anne also plans to share Thanksgiving dinner with Greg, Pam and other family members.

JEAN R. WENTE TO BE HONORED

Commander David Armanasco has announced The Grand Assemblage of the Brotherhood of the Knights of the Vine will be held at Santa Catalina School in Monterey on Saturday, Dec. 4.

Jean R. Wente of Wente Brothers Winery will be honored as Supreme Lady of the Vine in recognition of her contribution to the wine industry of California.

Wente is one of the pioneers of Monterey County wines and is vice president and chief financial officer of Wente Brothers, Inc. She was president of the Monterey Winegrowers Council for 1980-1981.

She is a graduate of Stanford University and is a trustee of California College of Arts and Crafts and director of the California State Automobile Association.

Among her community activities, she serves on the board of the Oakland Museum Association and on the Alameda County Art Commission.

MONTEREY BAY ALUMNAE PANHELLENIC PLAN LUNCHEON AT ROCKY POINT RESTAURANT

Monterey Bay Alumnae Panhellenic women will hold a luncheon meeting at Rocky Point Restaurant on Saturday, Dec. 4. The social hour will be at 11:30 a.m. followed by lunch at 12:30 p.m. A short business meeting will follow at 1:30 p.m.

The meeting is open to all members of a national sorority residing in this area. Reservations are limited to 40 persons.

CHRISTMAS ARTS AND CRAFTS FAIR

Thanksgiving has arrived, so there's no way that we can ignore the fact that Christmas is just around the corner. There's still time to purchase those hard-to-find gifts for special friends and one good place to shop will be the Christmas Arts and Crafts Fair given by The University For Man. The fair will be held at the Custom House Plaza, Fisherman's Wharf, Monterey, on Nov. 27 and 28 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Seventy-five artists and craftspeople will display and sell their handmade works. For further information, call the UFM office at 373-2641 between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. daily.

TOR HOUSE DOCENTS were treated to a wine and cheese reception by the Tor House Foundation Board of Trustees last Friday afternoon. Among those who attended were (from left) Docent Chairwoman Agnes Nohrnberg, Ann Yost, scheduling, and Hazel Mohler, who is in charge of docent training.

Lester Henderson off to Japan

Lester Henderson, longtime Carmelite and owner of the Henderson Gallery in Monterey, is off to Japan but the trip will be mostly work — not pleasure.

It all has to do with Lester's second book on Martha Mood and her stitcheries. The first book with text by himself and Shirley Koploy has already won three industry awards.

The new book on Martha Mood, a companion book to the first, promises to be even more beautiful than the original one. This one will have 141 illustrations, so Lester is in Japan to approve all press proofs. He wants to make sure the color is perfect and, under his watchful eye, you can bet is will be.

Like the first book, the second will have a full color cover of a Martha Mood stitchery. The stitchery used on the cover of the first volume is Mood's "Safari" stitchery. The one used for the new book is titled: "America's First Families."

Our flying ace will be in Japan until Nov. 21. When he returns home he will continue with one of his current projects in which donors are giving groups of the Martha Mood books to be distributed to top art museums and art libraries throughout the country.

Lester has the world's largest collection of Martha Mood stitcheries and has had tapestries woven from many of the stitchery designs. Both are on view at his Monterey gallery.

When not working at the gallery or on the books, Lester likes nothing better then to take his "Flying Art Show" around the country, where he shows the Mood works in private homes. With a co-pilot, he flies his Cessna (280) Turbo-Stationair all over the country with the show and is frequently gone for months at a time.

Lester, by the way, doesn't know the meaning of the word "age." In his 70s, he has a success record that just won't quit - including his recent wedding to the lovely Syd Demarest. We'll have more details on the book and the trip when Lester arrives home.

HELEN SPANGENBERG, a docent for Tor House, and Kenneth Yost, a member of the board of trustees, were among those who attended the party at Tor House.

Tor House docents are honored

The setting sun cast a warm glow on Robinson Jeffers' famous Tor House recently when 30 docents were honored with a wine and cheese reception by the Tor House Foundation Board of Trustees.

Hosts and their guests gathered in the spacious dining room at Tor House to socialize, sip wine and nibble on a variety of food. A fire in the massive stone fireplace gave the room a cozy feeling, but many of the guests chose to sit outside on the stone benches and huge rocks where they could see the sunset.

Docent Chairwoman Agnes Nohrnberg was there to welcome guests, as were Foundation President George White and Vice Presidents Richard Tevis and Mrs. Richard Roberts.

Trustees in attendance included Beth Wright, Dr. Kenneth Yost, Howard Brunn and John Dotson. Tor House Foundation Executive Director Nancy Miller was also present.

Officers of the Docent Council are Agnes Nohrnberg, chairwoman; Anne Yost, scheduling; Hazel Mohler, training; Patricia Hunt, special events; and Phyllis Kelly, reservations.

Soroptimists have dinner at golf and country club

The dining room of the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club was festively decorated last Saturday evening when the Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay celebrated its recently conveyed charter with a dinner. Presentation of the new club's charter was made by Governor June Errica.

Dr. Louise Friend Belknap, president of the sponsoring Soroptimist Club, Soroptimist International of the Monterey Peninsula, was present to greet the many guests who attended.

Entertainment was provided by Allen Gilbert of Broadway fame. Pianist Steve Tosh accompanied Gilbert when he sang his rendition of "Up Up And Away," which was the theme of the charter party.

Regional Governor-Elect, Lucille Hammer, conducted the installation of officer.

Tricia Doran was installed as president of the new service club. Other officers installed were Lee Chamberlin, first vice president; Kate Breauleux, second vice president; Judy Brooke, treasurer; Dorothy Hinton, recording secretary; Patricia Blackwood, corresponding secretary; and directors Sallie Conn, Sandy Faas and Doreen Gearhardt.

The first Soroptimist club was chartered in Oakland in 1921. In their constitution was the original 85 members set forth the purpose of Soroptimist.

"To foster the ideal of service as the basis of all worthy enterprises and to increase the efficiency of its members in the pursuit of their occupations by broadening their interest in the social, business and civic affairs of the community through an association of women representing diverse occupations.'

Obituaries

Arthur B. Ingham

A family memorial service was held at the Pebble Beach home of Arthur B. Ingham who died Thursday, Nov. 18 after a long period of failing

His death, which came 10 days after his 98th birthday. closed an outstanding career in public education. His career began in 1904 as a teacher in a one-room schoolhouse in his native Iowa when he was 19, and continued until his retirement from the Monterey County Board of Education in 1979, when he was 94.

Born Nov. 8, 1884, in Washington County, Iowa, Ingham grew up as a "farm boy" until, following graduation from high school, he took a special one-week course which qualified him to teach in a rural grammar school.

During his career in public education, he was variously a principal, district superintendent and a state athletic commissioner.

In 1917, he was hired as principal of Pacific Grove High School, a position which he held for 28 years, during the last two doubling as superintendent. He was Pacific Grove superintendent from 1943 to 1948, when he resigned to take the post of executive secretary of the California Interscholastic Federation (CIF), with which he had been affiliated for many years.

Among his complishments during his career, Ingham was credited with establishing the first summer school in California, when Pacific Grove High School pioneered the concept in 1934.

In 1956 he was elected to the Monterey County Board of Education, a position in which he served for six consecutive four-year terms. In 1980, the county's new $1.5 million school for handicapped children was opened at San Benancio and named the A.B. Ingham School for Exceptional Children.

He was a longtime member of the First United Methodist Church of Pacific Grove.

His first wife, Helen, to whom he was married for 53 years, died in 1968. He subsequently married a cousin, the former Florence Ingham, who survives him.

He also leaves daughters, Barbara Mearns of Carmel, Louise Thompson of Portland, Ore., and Elizabeth Adler of Santa Monica; 12 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the donor's favorite charity.

William L. Bremer

Graveside services were held at Mission Memorial Park in Seaside on Friday, Nov. 19 for William L. Bremer, 80, of Carmel who died Thursday, Nov. 18, at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital after a short illness.

Bremer was born in Earlville, Ill., June 25, 1902. He had been a Peninsula resident for the past 20 years and was associated with the Derek Rayne store in Carmel at the time of his death.

He was a member of Temple Beth Israel in Monterey, and is survived by his wife, Evelyn, and sister, Jeanette Maimom of Trotwood, Ohio.

Rabbi Mark Gross of Temple Beth Israel officiated at the services. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the donor's favorite charity.

Marguerite Jennings

Marguerite Jennings, 78, died Nov. 10 at her home at Del Mesa Carmel.

She was born Oct. 10, 1904, in Springfield, Ill.

Mrs. Jennings leaves no relatives. Cremation took place at the Little Chapel bythe-Sea, Pacific Grove, under auspices of the Paul Mortuary, with ashes scattered at

Leslie Wilber Bitney

According to his wishes, there will be no funeral services for Leslie Wilbur Bitney, 75, a resident of Carmel since 1976, who died Monday, Nov. 15 at Community Hospital after a short illness.

Bitney was a native of Spearfish, S.D., where he was born Aug. 8, 1907.

He formerly resided in Los Altos Hills and for 23 years was the owner-operator of the Peninsula Door and Plywood Co.

He is survived by his wife, Lillian; a daughter, Sue L. Hedquist of Gales Creek, Ore.; a son, Jerry Bitney of Soquel; a sister, Marie Gruett of Olympia, Wash., and three brothers, William Bitney of Mercer Island. Wash., Ralph Bitney of Enumclau, Wash., and Robert Bitney of Saratoga, as well as six grandchildren.

After cremation, his ashes will be scattered at sea. Paul Mortuary is in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

William Sergeant

Memorial services were held Thursday, Nov. 18 at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea for William Fowler Sergeant of Pebble Beach who died Sunday, Nov. 14 at Community Hospital after a brief illness.

Sergeant formerly lived in Lafayette. He lived in Carmel Meadows for five years and in Pebble Beach for 10 years.

A native of Preston, England, he was born Nov. 17, 1904.

He was a general insurance broker for many years with his own agency in Berkeley, before retiring in 1963.

He was a member of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, Orinda Masonic Lodge, Carmel Kiwanis Club and Elks Lodge of Berkeley.

He is survived by his wife, Olyve, who is known as Pat; daughters Deborah Hochleutner of Los Altos and Sally Lawrence of Kensington; brother, John L. Sergeant of Orinda; five grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Frank Bulkley officiated at the services. Cremation was followed by the scattering of ashes at sea. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Hospice of The Monterey Peninsula, Box 223139, Carmel, 93922.

Howard Matheny

Private arrangements have been made at the Paul Mortuary for Howard C. Matheny who died Saturday, Nov. 13 at Community Hospital of cancer. Matheny had been a resident of Carmel for the past three years. He was 58.

Matheny was born Feb. 6. 1924 in Belpre, Ohio.

He was formerly a resident of Glendale and Huntington Beach. He was employed as a store manager for Montgomery Ward for 15 years, first in Baltimore, Md., then in Huntington Beach, and later in Eagle Rock. He retired in 1979.

After he moved to the peninsula, he became the owner of Lighthouse Printing in Monterey. Matheny was a business administration graduate of the University of Arizona and served as a lieutenant in the Marine Corps during the Korean War.

In Huntington Beach, he was a past president of the Merchants Association for Huntington Center, as well as a member of the Rotary Club and a member of the board of directors for Golden West College. He was also a former member of the Monterey Kiwanis Club.

Matheny is survived by his Barbara; two daughters, Barbara Matheny of Irvine, and Kimberly Hemmingsen of Carmel: two sons, William of Irvine and Edwin of Fallbrook; a sister, Phyllis Lingo of Warren, Ohio; and two brothers, Jack of Beaverton, Ore., and George of Kearney, Ariz.

Clarice Morano

A Mass of the Resurrection was said Saturday, Nov. 20 at the Carmel Mission Basilica, with Monsignor MacMahon as celebrant, for Clarice Morano who died Monday, Nov. 15, at Community Hospital after a lengthy illness.

Mrs. Morano lived in Pebble Beach. She was born in Wenatchee, Wash. She lived in San Francisco and San Luis Obispo and attended the University of Southern California. She and her husband moved to Pebble Beach 10 years ago.

She was founder and executive volunteer director of Insight Unlimited, Inc. — an activities program for blind children in Monterey, San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara counties. The program, which she began 21 years ago in Bakersfield, grew to serve up to 163 children, and provided them with swimming, diving, baseball, horsemanship, field trips and other activities.

The program includes a bowling tournament for blind children. She also started a program at Soledad Prison that put inmate volunteers to work typing large-print books for the blind. She also entertained and played the organ at many convalescent hospitals.

Mrs. Morano was honored by many civic organizations for her work. She was invited to the White House three times to discuss programs for blind youth.

She is survived by her husband, Gary and her sister, Marjorie Tubbs of Cambria

Mrs. Morano's niece, Anita Morano, a graduate of Notre Dame with a major in voice, sang at the mass. Interment was at Cambria Pines Cemetery.

The family suggests memorial contributions to Insight Unlimited, P.O. Box 2052, Salinas, Calif. 93905.

Girlie A. Wyman

Memorial services will be held Nov. 19 at Collier Mortuary in Louisiana, Mo., for Girlie A. Wyman who died Friday, Nov. 12 at Carmel Convalescent Hospital after a lengthy illness. She was 88.

Mrs. Wyman was born

March 28, 1894, in Lovelaceville, Ky. She came to the Monterey Peninsula from Louisiana, Mo. in 1969. and made her home in Monterey. Her husband, E.

M. Wyman, died in 1958. Mrs. Wyman is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Jackson H. D'awiddie of Pebble Beach: to grandchildren and four reat grandchildren.

The family suggests that contributions go to the cancer fund at Community Hospital or the Pike County Hospital Nurses' Educational Fund in Louisiana, Mo.

Mission Mortuary is in charge of local arrangements. Burial will be in Louisiana,

Roy Collison

Private family services were held Tuesday, Nov. 23 for Roy Collison of Carmel who died after an apparent heart attack on Friday, Nov.

Born Nov. 20, 1931 in Galloway, Mo., Collison was a well-known golfer of the Monterey Peninsula for the past 30 years. He was a stove repair man for the past 10 years, and a member of the Elks Club in Monterey and a past president of the Monterey Bay Club.

Collison was a veteran of the Korean War, serving as a sergeant in the Army. He was awarded a Purple Heart.

He is survived by a son, Jeffrey of Rogersville, Mo.; daughters, Kimberly Young of Santa Rosa and Nanette Collison of Salinas; his mother, Eula Edna Collison of Rogersville; brothers, Norman, Raymond and John, all of Springfield, Mo., and William and Daniel, both of Rogersville; a sister, Neta Jo Stapp of Rogersville, and two grandchildren.

Following the family services cremation took place at Monterey City Cemetery under the direction of Mission Mortuary.

The family suggests that contributions go to the American Heart Association in Salinas.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Older people, particularly those between 60 and 70, are the most common victims of stroke. A stroke occurs when the flow of blood through vital vessels nourishing the brain is blocked.

An important early warning sign of stroke may be a transient ischemic attack, a feeling of numbness often in the hand or forearm, then in the face. which lasts between two minutes and two hours. Anyone who experiences this should consult a physician as soon as possible, says the American Heart Association.

According to a Purdue University study, older people get high scores for coping with changes in their lives. The study found that they often suffer less from psychological stress than middleaged or young people.

A Thanksgiving poem

"A Poem"

Each year when it comes Thanksgiving I try to think of another way to give a worthy "Thank You" On this, America's special day,

But what is an adequate thank you For a blossom, a moonbeam, the dew A thought, a feeling That becomes a part of you?

And what about our hopes and dreams A longed for wish come true? And those ever-precious intangibles Like love and caring too?

Lord, I've found a way to say "Thank You" For things so diverse and apart I'll gather them all together As I offer up my heart."

And thank you Rita Shields — a joyful Irish American gal from San Francisco — for your unique contribution to Carmel's Thanksgiving. Amen.

A special Thanksgiving day feast in Carmel

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

THE HOLIDAY season is a time for giving and sharing. It's a time when family and loved ones gather, and here in the village the aroma of turkey cooking in the oven blends with the scent of wood smoke and pine trees.

Thanksgiving Day has arrived and the traditional dinner of turkey, candied yams, mashed potatoes and giblet gravy, pumpkin and mincemeat pies and other good things graces dining tables all over town.

More than 125 people who have no family with whom to share the day have gathered in the Carmel Foundation Diment Hall to enjoy a special dinner prepared by Foundation Chef Sue Gage assisted by Gail Patrick and Reginald Barnes.

Also helping out is the Foundation staff. including Betty Plank, executive director; Mary Alice Jones, office manager; Janet McFadden, home service director and Betty Welge and Judy Gibbons, home service assistants.

The diners are to be served by a special group of men — members of the Carmel Rotary Club. Former Carmel Police Chief Bill Ellis, chairman of the senior citizens committee of Rotary, will lend a hand as will his committee members, Fred Stanley, James Heisinger and Bill Fisher.

Rotary members who will assist the committee include Barney Laiolo, Lee Hill, Mike Stanton, Dan Yurkovich, Kenneth Yost, Harris Taylor, Rick Carver, Bill Bekker, Dr. Chris Manke, Dr. Rich Beacham, Bob McFarren, Jack Wagner, Jack Gibson and Merv Greer.

The Carmel Rotary Club was chartered March 10, 1950, and has a membership of more than 100. Weekly luncheon meetings are field Wednesdays at La Playa hotel.

Along with assistance in serving the Thanksgiving dinner for senior citizens at the Carmel Foundation, the club provides $300 monthly to the Carmel Foundation to help subsidize their daily luncheons and participates in the community's lifesaver program by provision and Installation of 50 smoke alarms in the homes of senior citizens. in cooperation with the Carmel Foundation and the Carmel Fire Department.

Each year club members cook and serve a New Year's Day dinner for between 50 to 60 needy senior citizens. The festive dinner is always held at a local restaurant. They also deliver 15 to 20 of these dinners to local shut-

The Carmel Rotary Club also assists in funding a local Boy Scout troop, provides a $1,000 annual scholarship to Carmel High School, provides a $2,000 annual J.O. Handley Grant awarded to the recipient's selection of a non-profit organization, and awards various grants to youth organizations annually as budgeted funds permit.

Rotary Club members plan to deliver about 25 Thanksgiving dinners today to shutins who are members of The Carmel Founda-

Betty Plank, Foundation executive director, said: "This Thanksgiving dinner is very special to us. We decorate the dining room in a festive manner and all those who attend the dinner consider themselves one big family. No one should be alone today and we're all happy to donate our time to make sure that the event is a happy one."

"This is the premise of Rotary," Bill Ellis said. "To help others, to give service above self. It's a rewarding experience to give our time and help to others. We all have a lot to be thankful for so we're just grateful that we have this opportunity to bring some happiness to other people."

Mission choirmaster honored for Yule song

For the past three years, the Carmel community and Cultural Commission has offered a prize of $100 for the best original holiday song written by a peninsula resident.

Do You Hear Someone?, written by Jason Anderson, is the winner of the 1982 competition. Anderson, a 31 year cld native Californian, began 12 years of piano study under Charles Fulkerson at the age of five, and subsequently attended Whitman College and the Conservatory of Music.

He spent 10 years as a professional jazz musician, keyboard artist, singer, composer and arranger. Currently, he is the choirmaster and composer at Carmel Mission Basilica, and a music teacher with the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District.

Anderson is the composer of numerous instrumental, solo vocal, and vocal ensemble works, several of which including The Waking, a song cycle, and Missa de Divino Infanta, have been premiered on the Monterev Peninsula.

In the past two years, Anderson has specialized in the composition of liturgical pieces of the Roman Church specifically focusing on the liturgical poetry of the Middle Ages. His recent original setting of The Holly and the Ivy, as well as his Salvete, Flores Martyrum, for womens' voices, and his devotional masterwork The Burning Babe, will be sung at the Mission Basilica during Christmas time.

Do You Hear Someone?. will be sung at the opening celebration of the holiday season Saturday, Dec. 4 at 3 p.m. at Sunset Theater, Carmel. There will be a com- Center to share with others. bined choir rehearsal For further information. Wednesday, Dec. 1 at 7:30 p.m. in the theater. Persons who would like to sing on the stage, should plan to attend this rehearsal; it is not necessary to belong to a church choir to join in the performance.

The community celebration of the holiday season is free. Share in this community activity by baking your favorite cookie or Christmas treat to bring to Sunset phone 624-3996.

Recital to feature harpists

Harpists from throughout the United States and several other countries will perform in recital Saturday, Nov. 27 at 8 p.m. at Hidden Valley.

These outstanding harpists are in the area to study in the third annual Susann McDonald harp class at Hidden Valley Music Seminars, Carmel Valley and Ford Roads, Carmel Valley.

This master class brings together some of the finest harpists for a week of intensive study under the tutelage of Miss McDonald. Applicants are carefully evaluated and auditioned prior to acceptance into the program.

Considered by many to be one of the most accomplished harpists in the world today, McDonald heads the harp departments of the Julliard School of Music in New York and Indiana University in Bloomington.

Tickets for the International harp recital are $6 and are available from Countrywide Crafts in The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel. For further information. phone 659-3115.

Crowsnest troupe offers evening of innovative dance

The innovative dance company Crowsnest, will perform Sunday, Dec. 5 at 8 p.m. in Sunset Center, Carmel, as part of the Carmel Festival of Dance.

Martha Clarke and Robert Barnett, both original members of Pilobus Dance Theater. first met Felix Blaska in Paris where he had been the director of his own internationally renown dance company for many years.

Through subsequent correspondence, the ideas for an experimental project gradually evolved, and in 1978 Crowsnest was formally founded by Clark and Blaska. They were joined shortly thereafter by Barnett. Since the company's debut at the 1979 American Dance Festival, Crowsnest has proven to be a successful as well as unusual collaboration between three unique theatrical personalities.

Their intention was to develop a blend of theater and dance that would be exciting emotionally as well as visually. Now, after four years, this particular combination of physical daring and evocative, dramatically oriented movement has produced a body of work unrivaled in richness and psychological complexity. Crowsnest has established itself as one of America's most unusual dance companies.

Crowsnest has been the subject of a television special for Danish National Television and was featured in a recent film for U.S. public television directed by Clarke and Joyce Chopra.

The company tours extensively in the U.S. and Europe. In addition to regular appearances at the American Dance Festival, it has performed at major summer festivals in Avignon, Madrid, Spoleto, Italy, Spoleto, U.S.A., Palm Beach and Santa Fe. They have appeared at Joseph Papp's N.Y. Public Theater, the Theater de la Ville in Paris, and will soon give their first performance at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

Le Monde of Paris has said of Crowsnest, "This dance is truly an art of the imaginary which startles the audience and opens the doors of dreams."

Tickets for the performance are $8.75 and $7.75. All seats are reserved. For further information, phone 624-3996.

CROWSNEST, dance company consists of Felix Blaska, Martha Clarke and Robert Barnett (pictured above in Haiku). Crowsnest is composed of two former members of the famed dance theater troupe Pilobus. They will perform Sunday, Dec. 5 at Sunset Center, Carmel, as part of the Festival of Dance.

·Film review:-

Disney's departure is a gain for fans

By ANNE TELFORD _

Tex. With Matt Dillon, Jim Metzler, Meg Tilly, Emilio Estevez and Ben Johnson. Written by Tim Hunter and Charlie Haas. Directed by Tim Hunter. A Walt Disney Production.

Tex, has a realistic, gritty feel to it. Based on the best-selling novel by S.E. Hinton, the film deals with a common theme the problems of adolescence — in an uncommonly real and immediate way.

Tex represents a departure from recent Disney films and is a definite step forward. It catapaults Disney Studios into the real world and temporarily out of the video world.

In a telephone interview with the Carmel Pine Cone/Outlook, first time director Tim Hunter explained that the book on which Tex is based "has a solid audience" and is "a teenage story with family appeal."

Hunter said Disney Studios didn't want a compromise but wanted to present a film that was family-based and realistic. In the 1980s, "realistic" means the film includes a mild sex scene, some swearing, a broken home, a few dope dealers and a 15-year-old with typical 15-year-old problems.

S. E. Hinton might not be a familiar name to adults but to teenagers she is a star. Her four novels have sold more than 10 million copies and have established her as a leader in young adult fiction.

Director Francis Ford Coppola recently completed a film version of Hinton's teen classic The Outsiders, also starring Matt Dillon, for release later this year. Coppola is presently working on a film version of Rumblefish, another of Hinton's

As a first directorial effort, Tex is a definite plus for Hunter's career. The major film reviewers have been nearly unanimous in their praise of Tex. When Rex Reed, Roger Ebert, David Ansen and Janet Maslin all agree on a film, it's bound to have quality.

Tex is played ably by teen idol Matt Dillon, who is just young and naive enough to be convincing when he is righteously indignant, and just young and handsome enough to be charming in his love scenes with Meg Tilly.

Tex and his brother Mason live in Bixby, Okla. Their father is on the rodeo circuit and away from home for months at a time. Their mother is dead. Mason, who is barely 18, must provide for his younger brother and himself, while he trains for a basketball scholarship at the University of Indiana.

Along the way, Mason is forced to sell "Rowdy," Tex's beloved horse, to buy groceries and turn the electricity back on. This is a turning point for Tex, who has to learn to give things up. He also learns to desire other things, namely his best friend's sister, Jamie.

Emilio Estevez, actor Martin Sheen's son, turns in a good debut performance as Johnny Collins, Tex's friend and coprankster. The two do such notable hijinks as putting explosive caps inside the school typewriters before finals — a little trick Tex learned from his irresponsible father.

During the course of the film Tex becomes involved with a criminal hitchhiker, played with tense enthusiasm by stage actor Zeljko Ivankek, currently seen as the lead in The Sender. Tex successfully thwarts the hitchhiker's attempt to get him and his brother to drive the thug to the state line. Tex is told by a sheriff that he is "either brave, stupid or lucky," to which Tex replies: "People have been telling me that all my life."

Tex is a synthesis of all those things, however, with an important addition — he has heart. In one scene he tenderly holds a baby for the first time (played by Tim Hunter's new baby son), and seems thrilled by the adult pleasures of marriage and family, values lacking in his own upbringing.

Dillon's performance is reminiscent of the James Dean and Montgomery Clift school of sensitive acting. His tight-jeaned swagger and youthful insecurities seem believable, and endear him to the audience. He will have no trouble escaping his teen idol image if he keeps getting solid roles like Tex.

Tex is a heartwarming film that will be appreciated by teenagers and adults alike. Much like An Officer and a Gentleman, it is an uplifting film that chronicles change and growth.

....Backgammon.....

Should you double?

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You. White, are on roll in the diagrammed position. You have borne off three men, but you are only two points ahead in the race. (If neither side wastes a single point on the dice for the rest of this game, you need two points less than Black.) Your position for further bearing off is not as good as Black's.

Should you double? In a match between Billy Eisenberg and Paul Magriel during the 1979 U.S. Open Championship, Magriel did not double. He then rolled double four and doubled at his next turn, but Eisenberg wisely resigned.

In an excellent book on this match, backgammon expert Kent Goulding reports that this position was played more than 10,000 times on a computer, resulting in more than 7,000 victories for White. On this basis. White should clearly double.

With reasonably good luck, Black will need eight rolls to bear off his 15 men.

Even if White bears off only one man three or four times he should still get off in eight rolls. The "race," measured by the number of pointsneeded on the dice, is far less important than the number of rolls needed to get off.

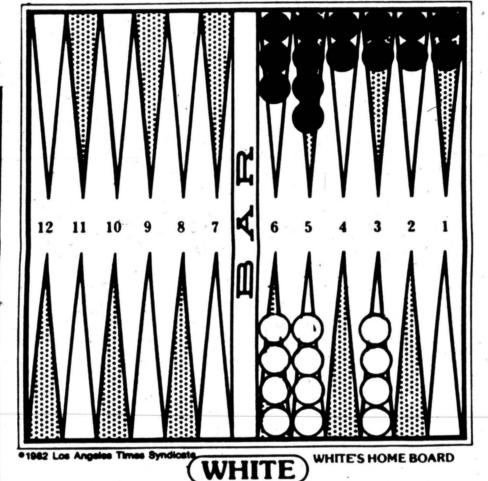

Since Magriel is one of the world's best backgammon players, it's hard to argue with his decision; but the position is worth consideration.

If you can't get Goulding's excellent books on matches between world class players at your backgammon club. send me a request, and I'll pass it on to him.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, selfaddressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Sunset Views Count our blessings today

‱%By RICHARD TYLER.......

THANKSGIVING is a time to count our blessings and those of us who live on this Peninsula have so much to be grateful for. Among the many things that we have, we certainly must realize what a gift the Sunset Community and Cultural Center has proven to be.

However, I think we also ought to be grateful for the many communities that have taken a similar stance and created art centers from old buildings. That kind of recycling has become popular now that good space is at a premium and so many towns are concerned about keeping historical places intact.

What usually happens is that an old structure, such as a school or warehouse, is abandoned and perhaps slated for demolition. Then an arts group comes along to salvage the building for cultural purposes.

San Francisco's Fort Mason, an old Army base, was transformed into a huge arts center. But let us join in giving thanks to the many others who have made an "adaptive use" of buildings that had lost their usefulness in their original plan.

One of the more impressive conversion projects is the Santa Cruz Art Center with its combination of art offerings and small restaurants. The building was once a factory which produced fireplace units. Since then, it has added a co-op gallery, 71-seat theater, exhibition space, craft spaces, and a restaurant that helps draw local people who wouldn't otherwise be introduced to the arts displayed there.

In nearby San Juan Bautista, the El Teatro Campesino group worked similar miracles on an old packing shed. In 1979, the group bought a dilapidated fruit and vegetable packing house for its immense space. The theater now seats 175-200 and has premiered such plays as Bandido.

If San Juan Bautista is rural, Death Valley Junction is positively remote. But that's where the Amargose Opera House is located, in a wing of what was once a dormitory for mining company workers. Performer Marta Cecket and her husband, Tom Williams, were touring the country with her concert program in 1967 when they had a flat tire in Death Valley Junction.

The town charmed them so they decided to give up touring and stay a while. They rented one building in an adobe complex built in the mid-1920's by the company that became U.S. Borax. The town's original social hall turned into a permanent theater. In 1973, they bought the opera house building and the town's other building in 1979 for gradual conversion to a hotel, dining room, and gallery.

The reputation of the opera house is sufficient to attract many who want to take in a rare cultural experience in a pleasant setting near Death Valley. Now that they have topped 1,700 performances, they say that they want to make a "desert campus and headquarters for field study groups" in the natural sciences, photography, and other fields.

A different sort of plan is being developed in the old Venice City Hall and jail buildings in the shadow of Los Angeles. The Beyond Baroque Foundation, which offers literary events and materials, moved into the abondoned city hall building in 1979. They also took in the Los Angeles Theater Works which needed office space. On the same property is the old Venice jail now occupied by the Social and Public Art Center, a group that had to take out large sections of cell block and do some redecoration to make the place usable. Together, the organizations are trying to persuade the city to preserve the two buildings for a West Side Arts Center and to allow a 500-seat theater to be built on the site.

Conversion projects often take place in school buildings (but then, we know that) like the former Frances Stevens School in Palm Springs. After local and state safety regulations forced its closure, the school was designated for cultural use and taken over by what is now the non-profit Village Center for the Arts in 1966. The center now offers more than 90 classes for about 1,000 people in subjects such as painting, dance, youth theater, music, and mime.

Most conversion projects are far from static. Renovation may continue over many years. But, as more of these projects prove successful, new ones spring up. A large consortium has formed around one building in downtown Los Angeles where the city redevelopment agency has blessed the arts with some great property funds to work with.

The former Fire Station No. 28, a three-story structure with 20,000 square feet of space, is to be the headquarters for the Los Angeles Theater Alliance, Dance Alliance, California Confederation for the Arts, and similar groups. It will also contain exhibition space and some limited rehearsal and performing space.

In Martinez, the Contra Costa county jail is being sought for renovation by the local arts alliance. In Santa Rosa, the old Christian Life Center is scheduled to become a performing arts facility housing the local symphony as well as touring concerts and plays.

Conversion projects are an excellent means for solidifying the bond between artists and their communities as well as preserving fine old buildings that are a cultural link to the past, and for this we are truly thankful.

Health department clinics scheduled

The County Health Department has announced its Public Health Clinic and holiday schedule for the Monterey Peninsula for the month of December.

The Health Department will be closed Dec. 24 and Dec. 27 in observance of Christmas, and Dec. 31 in observance of New Years

No appointments are needed at the following clinics held at the Seaside office, 1292 Olympia, phone 899-4271:

THE MITCHELL GROUP

IN CARMEL'S coveted southwest quadrant, this charming home has 2 bedrooms, 2 baths, beamed living room with fireplace and, a relative rarity for Carmel, an attached garage with entry from it to the house. The house is set back on an oak-studded lot with a brick path winding to the front door. This is an estate sale with a realistic asking price of $275,000.

REALLY WELL PRICED

HOW LONG since you have seen a three bedroom, two bath house in Carmel for $132,500? This one even has many extras. A sunny enclosed patio off the dining room and "big enclosed back yard." There is a brick fireplace in the living room, hardwood floors throughout and sliding glass doors to the patio from the master bedroom. It even has a double garage. Hurry!

THE PUMPKIN HOUSE

THE IDEAL SET-UP for the professional who wants a combination home and office in one property. A classic two-story Victorian home in Pacific Grove which was restored and converted to office use in 1979, this is in a convenient, highly visible location. The downstairs area is laid out with mostly open spaces, two small private offices plus a kitchen and bathroom. Upstairs are three private offices, another kitchen and bathroom. There is 1,680 square feet approximately, a two car garage, plus an elaborate security system, and carries a low price tag of $239,500.

ATTENTION BUILDERS

LOTS AND LOTS of building sites in our portfolio. There's a five-acre spot on Jacks Peak with a commanding view of the Monterey harbor priced at $269,500. There's a quarter-acre site in Carmel Woods with a guest house potential, superb financing and even an ocean view at $150,000. There is a ten-acre parcel on Corral de Tierra Road that could be divided into two or three sites priced at $137,500. And, finally, there are two small adjoining lots in Pacific Grove with some current income priced at $59,500 each.

OUTLOOK POINT

Outlook Drive takes off from Carmel Valley Road, about a half-mile east of Highway 1, under an assumed name. It starts as Rio Vista, turns into Canada Drive, then winds on up the northern hills as Outlook to the very top. And that's where you find this house.

It's an architectural tour de force. From a low flying plane its shape looks like a cross with 4 equal arms. Inside, it seems to be built about an octagonal stairwell which drops down from the entrance gallery. You enter on the second level, cross the Mexican tiles which cover many of the floors, and then the fun begins.

Everything points up. Windows on all sides — in living room, kitchen, bedrooms and baths — are tall and narrow, many coming to a Gothic peak. Though the space measures over 2650 square feet, there isn't a "square foot" in the house. All is angles, eccentric roof lines, oblique corners, oddly planed ceilings, ups and downs that sustain continuing interest.

The views are sensational: the sweep of Carmel Bay, Pt. Lobos thrusting seaward, long descending canyons forested in pines, a backdrop of mountains to the south. Every room looks out, yet every room is a personal sanctuary. The house is a continuing experience, changing with the sun, the wind, the fog — a companion and playmate of nature.

In literal terms, there are 3 bedrooms, 2 up and 1 down; 3 baths, each an experience in itself; a living room that reaches to the horizons; a kitchen that magazines would feature; breakfast room for a poet; downstairs den with a second fireplace and views the low flying plane could only equal; garage, storage and spaces yet to be explored. Everything is in place: gas and electric ranges, double ovens and warmdrawer, refrigerator, freezer, disposal, carpeting, drapes, special fixtures. A very special residence, on a halfacre. $595,000.

SUNDAY MORNING, is one of DeWitt Whistler Jayne's new paintings of the sea currently on display at the New Masters Gallery, Sixth and Lincoln, Carmel.

DeWitt Whistler Jayne:

His love of the sea is portrayed in his art

DeWitt Whistler Jayne, internationally recognized for his realistic oil and pastel portraits of sailing ships and the sea is currently being exhibited at the New Masters Gallery, Sixth and Lincoln, Carmel.

A distant cousin of the famed American artist, James MacNeill Whistler, Jayne has been painting for more than 50 years. He is one of those rare artists who can accurately depict the rigging of great sailing ships.

His intense concern for correct detail resulted from his early training at the Philadelphia Museum's School of Art where he, and classmate Andrew Wyeth, studied under the first-generation students of the great American illustrator — Howard Pyle. They were the artists who became internationally known as the Brandywine School.

His love of the sea began early. As a young man he mastered the art-science of sailing with the wind. At age 71, he still continues to sail, and he has assembled one of the nation's most comprehensive historical resource portfolios on old sailing ships. Jayne has spent years studying ships under sail and visiting the world's great ports and harbors.

Using a technique he has perfected over five decades, Jayne more than "draws" with the pastel chalk. He "paints" with the pure dry pigment, unmixed with fluids as are the other painting mediums; creating vibrant, sparkling, unique visions of the sea, people, and places.

During his career as an illustrator, Jayne executed more than 80 national magazine covers and some 200 book jackets. His national reputation began with commissioned portraits of then Senator John F. Kennedy, Vice President Richard Nixon, and other famed people including Fulton Lewis, Jr.

Jayne's works have been exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Philadelphia Art Alliance; and are in many personal collections as well as universities throughout the country.

Salvation Army Christmas activities to begin

The Salvation Army will kick-off its annual Christmas campaign Friday, Nov. 26 at 11 a.m. at The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road, Carmel.

Congressman Leon Panetta will drop the first contribution into the traditional kettle, accompanied by Salvation Army bell-ringers. Free coffee and doughnuts will be served courtesy of The Salvation Army's canteen, used during emergencies to help crews fighting fires and floods.

Salvation Army timbrels will perform, along with The Junior Singing Company.

"Local businesses, churches, service clubs and schools have been outstanding in their cooperation with us on the Christmas campaign," Captain Wes Sundin, commanding officer of the Monterey Corps, said.

Monterey Dodge, Singleton Chevrolet, and U.S. Army trucks will help The Salvation Army collect contributions of food for the needy. Contributions may also be brought to the corp center, 501 Hoffman, Monterey. For further information, phone 373-3197.

Special meeting of support group

The Bereaved Parent's Support Group, sponsored by Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula, and the Monterey County Health Department, is having a special meeting, Wednesday, Dec. 1 at 7:30 p.m. at the Trident Executive Center, South Building, Prolog Conference Room, 2600 Garden Road, Monterey.

Judy Tatelbaum, author of The Courage to Grieve, will be the featured speaker. Tatelbaum will be available to answer questions on grief. Refreshments will be served.

Interested persons are invited to attend. For futher information, phone 625-0666.

MODERN MADONNA

Helen Caswell has become one of America's best known painters of children. Her many loving paintings of childhood's magic moments, her books for children, and her portraits form a remarkable body of work, ranging from small, tender singlefigures to large, action-filled canvases.

ART AT CHRISTMAS TIME

A gift of Fine Art goes on giving for years, indeed for generations to come. If the painting or sculpture projects tranquility, happiness, adventure, appreciation of nature, or memories of place, you know that same emotion will continue to be a part of the recipients's life. As one of our clients remarked "whenever things get tense, I spend a few minutes with the Gisson painting I was given, and somehow serenity and common sense seem to take over again."

Gallery Americana has a wide range of memorable paintings in prices ranging from museum-quality Edward Sznyd's oils at more than 20,000 to Judy Chiu's exquisite small panels of birds, dogs, and pandas at 150. Our well-informed staff will be delignted to aid in your selection and to see that your gift is delivered precisely as requested.
